Blytheville, Ark. Apr. 25 (AP)—A tornado struck in the vicinity of Osceola, 18 miles north of here, today, injuring several Negroes and demolishing two cotton gins.

BULLETIN
Memphis, Tenn., Apr. 25 (AP)—Six persons are known to have perished, several others were reported killed and a score or more were injured in tornadoes that wrought great property damage in portions of Tennessee and Arkansas today.

Four communities in Shelby county, Tennessee, were the worst sufferers. Reports thus far show all of the deaths occurred there.

Memphis, Tenn., Apr. 25 (AP)—At least two persons were killed. Several others reported killed, and a score or more were injured by a tornado that twisted into the northern end of Shelby County, Tenn., today.

Mrs. T. J. Dale, 65, a farmer's wife, died at a Memphis hospital after the roof of her house near Kerville caved in. Her husband, who was working in the fields, was injured, as were three Negroes working with him.

A Negro, Robert Harris, 65, of Millington, died en route to a Memphis hospital.

All the injured were brought to hospitals here.

Newspapermen who visited the town of Millington, said about a dozen Negroes were injured there and that although houses and other buildings were wrecked, there were no deaths there. The reporters hurried on a survey at the other towns hit.

Communication Down
It was impossible at first to establish communication with Rosemark, Millington, Kerville and other communities reported in the path of the storms.

The tornado itself was not felt in Memphis, although the wind was high.

A high wind and rain storm, accompanied by hail, struck here last night but little damage was done.

The towns, all on the outskirts of Shelby county of which Memphis is the county seat, are about nine miles apart. Dr. Wallace A. Moore and a crew from the County Health Department went to the scene of the tornado, as did hospital crews and police officers.

C. I. Shelton, Rosemark merchant said several persons were injured there but he could not give their names. Two of them were brought to a hospital here.

Other reports said at least two were killed at Rosemark. Most of the injured there were taken to Brunsford for treatment.

A dozen homes in and around Rosemark and Millington were demolished, reports said.

President And Gov. Roosevelt To Meet
Washington, April 25 (AP)—President Hoover today accepted an invitation to address the Governors' Conference at Richmond, Va., next Wednesday.

The sudden acceptance of the invitation tendered him by governors of the various states probably will result in a meeting between the President and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor of New York and leading Democratic candidate for the presidential nomination.

The President will leave the White House late Wednesday forenoon.

Roosevelt is scheduled to address the conference Wednesday night.

The President's topic will be the relationship between the state and federal governments, economy and taxation.

Precautions Were Almost Nullified
Chicago, Apr. 25 (AP)—Benjamin Goodman is not the kind of a fellow to take chances with his money.

Consequently when the burglar alarm in his clothing store got out of order he solved the problem by sending his wife home with $65 cash from the store. For his own part he elected to stand guard at the store all night. No burglars came but two hold up men met Mrs. Goodman on her way home and took the $65.

Lois Keller, Aged 7, Died This Morn
Miss Lois Keller, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Keller, passed away this morning at 7:45 at the family home, 1333 First street, after an illness of five weeks duration. The funeral announcement and obituary will be published later.

REPORTS CAR STOLEN
A 1926 model Buick coach, belonging to J. A. Marshall, a local barber, was reported to the police as having been stolen last evening from the parking place near the evangelistic tabernacle on West Boyd street. Police of surrounding cities were notified.

DECLARED DELINQUENT
Frank Hamilton was declared delinquent by Judge Leach in the county court this morning and was committed to the St. Charles training school for boys where he was taken this afternoon. Hamilton, alias Joe Laing, was indicted by the April grand jury for the theft of an automobile belonging to Victor Eichler of this city, which was later recovered at Spring Valley, where it had been abandoned.

STATE POLICE BUSY
State highway police conducted a war on old license plates here all day Saturday and several hundred cars were halted and drivers were either given final notice to make application for 1932 licenses or were taken direct to notary public offices where the applications were made. Six state highway police engaged in the campaign against old license plates and violators were informed that arrests would follow in the event that warnings were not heeded.

TAXPAYERS TO MEET
An organization planned to secure a reduction in taxes in Lee county is to be perfected at a meeting which has been called for Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the court house. L. L. Castetter, publicity director of the Illinois Taxpayers' Association, will be present and explain the plans and purposes of the organization and organize a Lee county unit. Taxpayers from Lee, Ogle, Whiteside and Carroll counties have been invited to attend the meeting here Thursday afternoon. X. F. Gehant of this city is the temporary secretary and treasurer of the Lee County Taxpayers Association.

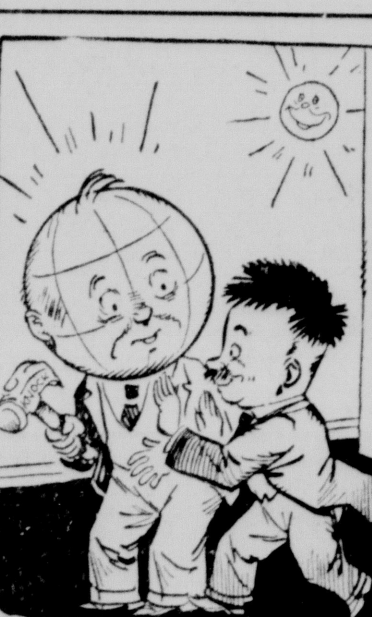

Says President
Has Pointed Way

Oklahoma City, April 25 (AP)—Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, told the Republican state convention here today President Hoover "has pointed the way to stabilization" of world-wide economic conditions.

The secretary, whose home is Tulsa, Okla., was giving the keynote address.

"The President has pointed the way to stabilization," said the World War veteran. "In Europe he led the way for an international moratorium to prevent the collapse of one great nation and to supply credit to others. In the Orient, the parties of the 9-power treaty and the pact of Paris and the League of Nations have followed his policies and acknowledged his leadership. At home, he submitted a program for economic reconstruction that largely has been enacted into law by a House of Representatives controlled by his political opponents."

In Search For Kid-

BULLETIN.
Norfolk, Va., April 25 (AP)—Activities of the Norfolk intermediaries in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, were believed today to be again centered in mysterious movements of the yacht Marion.

John Hughes Curtis, chief negotiator, was again absent from his home today, and the sailing of the yacht yesterday afternoon led to the belief that he may have boarded the craft sometime last night.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, and the Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, the other intermediaries, were silent regarding all the details of their negotiations.

The Maroon, owned by Col. Charles H. Converse of Baltimore, left Little Creek, about ten miles from here, yesterday afternoon and headed out into the Chesapeake Bay.

Hopewell, N. J., April 25 (AP)—The Lindberghs will move back to Englewood this week, probably Wednesday, away from the Sourland Hills home that has been the scene of so much sorrow for them in recent weeks.

Headquarters of the New Jersey State Police, in charge of the hunt for the kidnaped Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., will be at Trenton. Only two or three state troopers will be left at the estate to guard it against trespassers.

There have been no developments in the child hunt for several days. The Norfolk, Va., intermediaries, the aged educator who communicated with the kidnapers as "Jafsie," and other independent agencies which have been involved in the baby hunt have made no report of progress.

Shown Pictures Of Baby
Police announced today that motion pictures of a baby left in a nursery at San Jose, Cal., had been shown to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, but that after seeing the pictures they had said the baby was not their missing son.

Colonel Schwarzkopf said investigators had been sent to Downingtown, Pa., to question a couple held there.

"This couple," he said, "have not been connected with the Lindbergh case as yet."

TO QUESTION COUPLE
Downingtown, Pa., Apr. 25 (AP)—Chief of Police Chester Glisson said that State Police from Hopewell, N. J., will come to Downingtown today to question the man and woman held in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The couple gave their names as Albert Lacher of Philadelphia and Edith Crebbe of Detroit. They had been staying at an inn here for some time and were suspected of knowing something of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby after they are said to have sent a letter to the Lindbergh family and other persons at the inn heard them talking about the case.

Local authorities said the couple had given conflicting statements as to their whereabouts since the kidnaping. They had been at the inn since the second day after the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Police said Lacher made frequent trips away from the inn and admitted that he had been in New York since the kidnaping. The couple are said to have money in several banks, the locations of which were not revealed.

Mrs. Lucy Woodburn
Died Saturday Eve

Mrs. Lucy Emily Woodburn, a resident of Dixon for the past 30 years, passed away at her home, 410 Dixon avenue, at 8:45 Saturday evening, her death resulting from an illness of nine weeks' duration. She was born in Rushville, N. Y., December 17, 1844, and is survived by three daughters, Misses Jennie E. Lucy A. and Ona E., all at home.

Funeral services will be conducted from the family residence Tuesday morning at 10:30, Rev. J. Frank Young, pastor of the First Presbyterian church officiating. The body will be taken to Forrest, Ill., where final rites will be conducted from the Congregational church at 2:30 with interment in the Forrest cemetery.

To Bury Agnostic
In Arlington Soon

Washington, April 25 (AP)—The ashes of Robert Ingersoll, a noted agnostic, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery May 4 at 10 a. m.

War Department officials said today that "a friend" of Ingersoll had requested that a grave be prepared for that date. Permission was granted for Ingersoll's burial in Arlington on April 19, 1930. He served in the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry during the Civil War.

Department officials said that no mention was made in the application looking toward a similar burial for Mrs. Ingersoll.

LeRoy Bridges Is Called Sunday Eve

William LeRoy Bridges passed away at his home, 516 Third avenue, Sunday night at 10 o'clock, his death ending suffering of four months' duration. He had been engaged in the retail grocery business in Dixon for almost 40 years, until recently forced to retire because of failing health.

The deceased was the son of John G. and Susan Martha Verion Bridges and was born in El Paso, Ill., November 18, 1872. He came to Dixon when about 18 years of age and had resided here since. He is survived by his widow; one daughter, Miss Dorothy Evelyn at home; and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Reynolds and Mrs. D. Pitts, both of DeSmet, S. D.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Preston chapel Tuesday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. James Barnett, pastor of the Christian church officiating and with interment in the Grand Detour cemetery. The deceased was a member of the I. O. O. F. and Yeoman lodges of this city and was an active member in the Christian church.

RESTORATION OF CONFIDENCE BIG
NEED SAYS MILLSTreasury Chief Speaks At Annual Meeting Of AP Today

New York, April 25 (AP)—A re-invigorated credit structure and a "restoration of national confidence" were called for today by Secretary Mills as "twin weapons which must be forged to turn back the forces of destruction."

The Treasury chief, addressing the annual luncheon of The Associated Press at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, said that "the wave of fear and the tide of deflation has to be turned back."

"The only way that I know to bring adequate relief to the people of the United States," he said, "is to set in motion forces that will make economic recovery possible."

As one of these forces, Mills outlined controlled credit expansion, amply safeguarded by the Federal Reserve System.

"Controlled credit expansion is only possible through the operation of that system," he said. "I emphasize this to bring out the contrast between controlled expansion of this kind and pure inflation, such as is involved in proposals now before Congress for printing fiat currency, or such as would result ultimately from a series of unbalanced budgets."

On the budget question Mills was emphatic.

Emphatic On Budget
"No greater blow could be dealt to national confidence and the national credit," he emphasized, "than the failure of the federal government in times like these to follow a sound fiscal policy and to balance its budget."

"This means, for the government, drastic economies; for the people, an additional burden of taxation. What is the alternative? Continued borrowing at constantly increasing interest rates, progressive depreciation in the value of all outstanding government securities, loss of confidence and in the end uncontrolled inflation and a sad day of reckoning."

Mills termed it a "most extraordinary and baffling paradox that this country, richer in actual and real wealth, than anything ever dreamed of by any nation in the world," at the same time has been and is undergoing "the most severe depression ever experienced."

Outlined Causes
He outlined the causes and effects of the latest and most serious phases of the world-wide economic derangement, beginning last May with the insolvency of the great Austrian bank, Credit-Anstalt, which, he said, in turn undermined Germany, causing a collapse which shook confidence throughout the world, forced Great Britain off the gold standard, and swept down upon the United States and the American dollar.

"That battle was won, but the cost was heavy," he continued. "When the battle was over x x x the gold resources of the United States were over $700,000,000 lower, hundreds of banks had failed, the banks were heavily in debt to the Federal Reserve System and currency was being hoarded on an immense scale."

But for these events, he said, recovery might have begun many months ago. Even then when "the economic forces working towards contraction and deflation had fairly well spent themselves," Mills said the forces of recovery were more than offset by the "paralyzing fear which gripped our people, the loss of confidence, and the terrible contraction of credit which forced business and prices to new low levels."

Government Acts
There followed, as he sketched the process, the various means taken by the government to halt bank failures—86.4 per cent of those aided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were in towns of less than 25,000, he said—aid the railroads, insurance companies and other units "affected with the public."

DIXON MASONIC BUILDING ASSN.
LOST TAX APPEALSupreme Court Rules
It Must Pay Taxes
For 1928, 1929

Springfield, Ill., April 25 (AP)—Depositors in default state banks will be able to collect many thousands of dollars from former stockholders of the banks under a ruling given by the Illinois Supreme Court late Saturday.

Stockholders, the court held, are responsible for all debts incurred by the bank while they own the stock. This liability does not end when a stockholder sells the stock but continues until the debts are paid off by the bank.

While the ruling will be of benefit to depositors in closed banks, banking authorities here today said the decision would make the sale of bank stock and the re-organization of banking institutions extremely difficult.

The decision was given on an appeal of former stockholders of the Merchants State Bank of Centralia, against a judgment of the Circuit Court of Marion County, assessing them various amounts on the stock they formerly owned.

In giving the decision the court held that a stockholder cannot be held liable for the liabilities of the bank incurred before he became a stockholder nor for those incurred after he ceased to be such a stockholder.

The Dixon Masonic Building Association must pay taxes of $801 for 1928 and $822 for 1929, the Supreme Court ruled in affirming the County Court of Lee County. The fraternal organization claimed exemption on the grounds that the buildings were used exclusively for benevolent purposes.

Assessments levied in the White-side and Rock Island special drainage district for the construction of new ditches were upheld by the court in denying the appeal of H. G. Beardworth and others against the commissioners.

Michael F. Harvey
Died Early Sunday

Michael F. Harvey, life long resident of Lee county, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Hetler, east of Dixon on rural route 3, Sunday morning about 8:30, his death resulting from a long illness. He was born in Amboy, Sept. 10, 1855, and for the past 70 years had been a resident of Dixon and vicinity. He was a retired farmer and his last employment was at the Dixon state hospital, where several weeks ago he was forced to resign because of failing health.

Mr. Harvey is survived by four daughters and one son as follows: Mrs. Harry Hetler and Mrs. Lloyd Huggins, both of Dixon; Mrs. Edward Coffey of Chicago; Mrs. Edmund Bradley of West Brooklyn, James of this city; Terrance of Chicago, and Peter of Albany, Ill., and one sister, Mrs. Edward Fee of this city also survive. His wife preceded him in death several years ago.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Jones funeral home Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and from St. Patrick's Catholic church at 9:30 with interment in Oakwood.

Communists Loot
Americans' Homes

Amoy, China, April 21 (AP)—Advices from Changchow today said the Chinese Communist army had occupied the city and the soldiers were enjoying a carnival of looting which included raids upon the homes of American missionaries, schools, churches and other foreign property.

The Communists raided warehouses, stores and homes, the reports said, dividing the contents among themselves.

The belongings of one American missionary were saved by the quick thinking of the cook. The family had taken refuge here, but the cook stayed on the job. When the looters began hammering their way into the house she opened the door inviting them in.

When they entered she treated them to a meal of rice and ham. After eating all they could, they showed their appreciation by leaving the contents of the house intact. They even presented the cook a pair of slippers they had taken from the house next door.

Airplane observers reported that the approaching Cantonese army had arrived fifteen miles southwest of Changchow.

Conditions here remained very tense.

McWilliam's Death
Will Be Demanded

Rockford, Apr. 25 (AP)—The state has announced it would demand a second death sentence for Russell McWilliams, 17, in his retrial for the slaying of William Sayles, Rockford street car conductor, during a robbery.

The Supreme Court granted McWilliams a new trial. He was sentenced to die in the electric chair last December 11, but was spared in the last moment by a reprieve.

State Attorney William D. Knight of Winnebago county, who obtained McWilliams' first conviction, said last week there was nothing in the Supreme Court decision "to prevent an infliction of the death penalty again."

SENATE TO SEND
INVESTIGATORS
TO WALL STREETDetermined To Get To Bottom of Dealings
By Great Pools

BULLETIN
Washington, April 25 (AP)—Chairman Norbeck of the Senate Banking committee announced today the stock market investigation would be resumed tomorrow and promised a "big surprise."

"I can't talk about it now," Norbeck said, "but we will give you something to write about."

The committee chairman refused to say anything more about whether there would be a witness, or if so, who they would be.

He had announced earlier the investigation would not be resumed until Wednesday, and his sudden announcement caused widespread speculation.

Washington, Apr. 25 (AP)—The Senate Banking committee today ordered a full investigation of the stock market and determined to send investigators to New York.

At a lengthy executive session the committee agreed to appoint a subcommittee to employ additional counsel and investigators necessary to make the study in New York.

The committee is determined to find out the inside operations of the gigantic pool in stocks which operated on the "bull" side in the 1929 boom and on the "bear" side since the price collapse.

The trail of testimony so far taken, in the committee's investigation of the New York Stock Exchange, has established the existence of these combines, formed to profit by rise or fall of a particular stock, but all efforts have stopped dead when it came to proving what the pool traders did to force prices in the direction by which they planned to profit.

Hearing In Recess
A number of traders and brokers have been subpoenaed to appear before the committee, but they probably will not be heard for several days, as the hearings have been temporarily suspended.

Others may be called, including Chairman Raskob of the Democratic National Committee, who participated in a pool described in Saturday's testimony.

Conspicuous among the points the Senators wish to establish is whether the pools have been working with market specialists—brokers, who handle one stock and know the pending orders and holdings in that particular security.

Saturday's testimony brought into the record that M. J. McEahan, prominent broker, was a specialist in Radio stocks and that his wife participated in a pool operating in that line.

For specialists to pass out their confidential information is against the exchange rules.

At Least Six Men
Lost In Cave-In

Marnet, W. Va., Apr. 25 (AP)—Hampered by rains and dangers of crumbling walls of earth, rescue workers today delved into a mucky pit where at least six men lost their lives in a cave-in on the new Federal government dam near here.

They expect to find only the body of Charles Ryan, but will make a complete search of the area for other persons before ending their work. Five bodies have been recovered.

Two members of the night shift were trapped Saturday night as the banks of the Kanawha river slipped down on them. As between 50 and 75 workmen sought to rescue them, a second and larger cave-in sent hundreds of tons of sandy earth into the pit, burying at least four more men.

Rains which cascaded the slides were renewed yesterday to add further difficulties. A third cave-in, abetted by spectators near the edge of the pit, failed to catch rescuers but several of the onlookers were slightly injured.

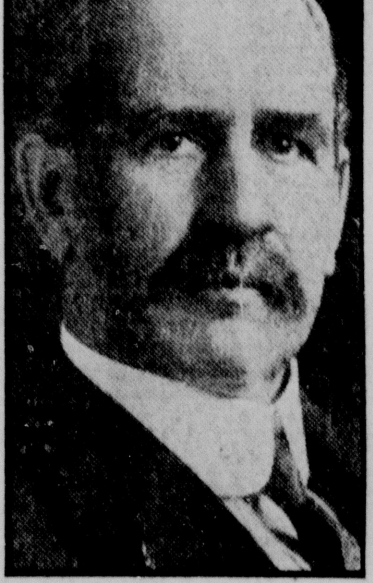

Scoutmaster Shot
Himself Sunday

Hillsboro, Ill., April 25 (AP)—Homer Langendorf, 23, Boy Scout suicide while alone in Scout headquarters at Harvard, committed quarters there last night by shooting himself in the temple with a revolver.

Langendorf left a note to his mother, Mrs. Louis Langendorf, stating he was in trouble and he wished to end it all. Disappointment in love was reported to have been the cause of his act.

Coroner George S. Chase of Hillsboro will hold an inquest this afternoon.

KIDNAPING PLOTAlleged Abductor Of Kansas City Woman
Is Apprehended

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, Apr. 25 (AP)—An American citizen arrested here last Friday at the request of the Attorney-General of the state of Missouri was identified today by the police as John Long.

They said this may be an alias. It was understood that the American authorities sought him as Martin Dewey the kidnaper of Mrs. Nell Donnelly, wealthy garment manufacturer, of Kansas City, Mo. (Kansas City advices yesterday said the State Department at Washington had been asked to seek the arrest of a man believed to be Martin Dewey at Durban, South Africa.)

The man was arrested by four detectives who found him in bed. He was on an American ship when it arrived recently at Durban.

Dewey was a steamshovel operator and was charged with kidnaping Mrs. Donnelly, who was later released without payment of $75,000 ransom demanded.

James R. Page, Jackson County, Mo., prosecutor, was understood to have asked the State Department to obtain the aid of British authorities at Durban in his quest and to have advised the Department that Dewey had been working as an officer on a merchant vessel under the name of Smith.

Three men and a woman, Dewey's wife, are under arrest, charged with complicity in the abduction.

Shots Heard While
Troops Entrained

Cadiz, O., Apr. 25 (AP)—The rattle of troops' machine guns and the crack of snipers' rifles beat out a farewell tune late yesterday when approximately 200 National Guardsmen were withdrawn and sent home from the eastern Ohio mine strike field. About 350 Guardsmen remained on duty today.

No one was injured in the exchange of shots and the attackers escaped, Capt. Joseph Parilla of Youngstown, reported.

Withdrawal of part of the troops was ordered by Gov. White Saturday in the belief the remainder were adequate to handle the situation with the cooperation of local authorities. He said all the troops would be removed as soon as he is assured there is no danger of further disorders.

Clinton Doctor To Face Trial Today

Chicago, Apr. 25 (AP)—Lester Tilton of Clinton, Ia., goes on trial in Criminal Court today on charges of conspiring to violate the medical practice act. He was indicted six months ago after patients at his cancer clinic complained.

Co-defendants are Dr. Joseph Duffy, a licensed physician, and Harry De Joannis, a promoter. The indictments named also James Madison Pace and Dr. Otto Hollinger, but both have died.

BIRTHDAY PARTY AT JOLIET HAS A TRAGIC ENDING

One Killed, Two Shot; Two Hurt In Auto Crash Afterward

Joliet, Ill., Apr. 25—(AP)—William Bailey's birthday party started happily last night but ended with one person shot to death, two wounded by bullets and two others injured in an auto accident laid to the shooting.
According to the version of police and guests of Bailey, Fritz Whitney, 30, arrived at the party intoxicated and fatally wounded Gaylord Hawk, 37, when he tried to persuade him to leave.
Robert Hawk, 35, brother of Gaylord and Randall Bailey, 30, brother of William, tried to seize Whitney. The police said he shot them both.
Meantime, Mr. and Mrs. James Kay, alarmed at the shooting, decided to leave for home. Half a mile away on route No. 4 Kay missed a turn and the car hurtled down an embankment. Both were injured and Mrs. Kay reported her death of skull fracture.
Whitney escaped but was arrested later by Deputy Sheriff Samuel Bailey, brother of the host. Robert Hawk and Bailey, both wounded in the hip, were taken to a hospital.

FORMERCHICAGO OFFICIALS FACE FRAUD CHARGES

Trail Of Former City Sealer And Helper Started Today

Chicago, Apr. 25—(AP)—Ten months after their indictment State Senator Daniel A. Serritella and Harry Hochstein, former city officials, under Mayor William Hale Thompson, went on trial today on charges of conspiracy to defraud housewives of $54,000,000 by winking at short weight practices of merchants.
Serritella, once City Sealer, and Hochstein, his assistant, pleaded not guilty on arraignment before Judge James J. Kelly, the fourth jurist the pair faced since their indictment. Judge Kelly overruled motions for another continuance for suppression of the evidence, and to quash the indictment. Selection of a jury was begun.
Serritella was one of the two Illinois State Senators described to a congressional sub-committee in Washington recently as "associates of Scarface Al Capone" by Frank J. Loesch, head of the Chicago Crime Commission.
Michael Ahern, chief defense counsel, asked for "only two more days" to prepare as defense, as he "just got back from Washington" where he had asked the Supreme Court to review Capone's income tax conviction.
"What have you been doing for the last year?" the Judge asked.

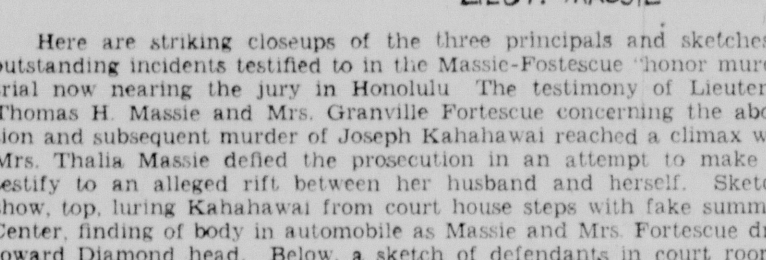

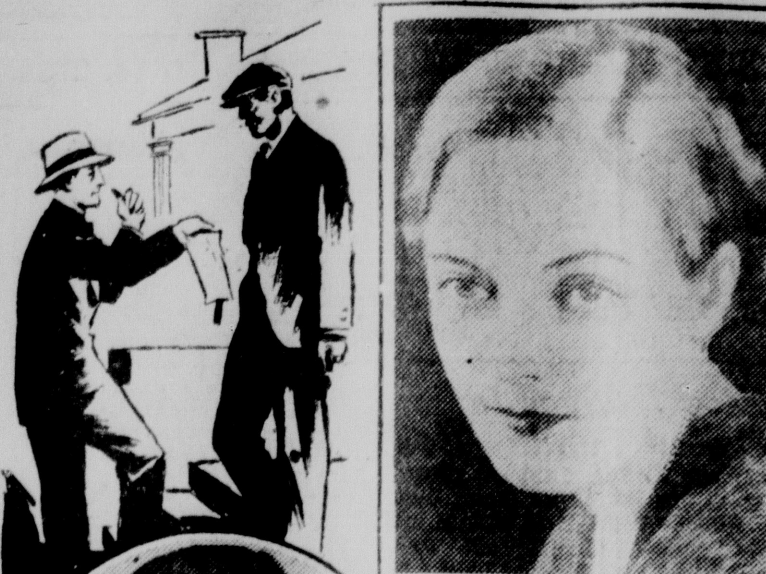

Opposes Capone's Plea In High Court

Washington, Apr. 25—(AP)—Opposition to a review by the Supreme Court of Al Capone's conviction was expressed today by the government through Solicitor General Thacher.
Capone's plea for review is now pending before the court and will probably be passed on May 2.
In a brief filed in the court today, Thacher said the government contended that the counts of the indictment against the racketeer were sufficient.
Capone in his plea for a review said he had been deprived of his constitutional rights because the counts of the indictment charged him in general terms with attempting to evade income taxes without specifying the particular way in which he went about it.

CHAIRMAN FARM BOARD REJECTS PRIVATE DEALS

Board Will Stand On Present Policy Of Selling Wheat

Washington, April 25—(AP)—Chairman Stone of the Farm Board has rejected all offers of private dealers for purchase of the board's surplus wheat and is determined to stand on the present policy of disposal abroad at the rate of 5,000,000 bushels a month.
Republican leaders in Congress urged upon the Farm Board Chairman the offers of the private dealers who had promised to sell the surplus abroad if given the right to purchase it from the board at market prices.
They contended disposition of the surplus would immediately stabilize the price of wheat and brighten the future.
Stone was adamant, however, holding it would upset the present market. The board surplus is now estimated at 107,000,000 bushels excluding the 40,000,000 given to the Red Cross.
At the Capitol it is understood the board feels a world shortage is developing which will permit orderly disposition of the remaining surplus.
Those who attended the conference with Stone included Senators Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader; McNary of Oregon, the chairman of the Agriculture committee, and Capper of Kansas, Representative Purnell of Indiana, and Secretary Hyde.
As an executive of the Star, Van Fleet was Harding's closest business associate. He had complete supervision of the paper during the time Harding was in Washington, beginning with the latter's first term as United States Senator in 1914.
Van Fleet became a member of the Star staff in 1905, eleven years after Harding acquired ownership. Starting as a reporter, he later was editor, telegraph editor and managing editor.

Recognize Russia Rep. Rainey Asks

Washington, April 25—(AP)—Recognition of Russia by the United States to stimulate business was urged today by Representative Rainey of Illinois, the Democratic leader.
Referring to the Sabath resolution, introduced last week, which would request the President to direct the Secretary of State to begin negotiations with Russia looking to a resumption of diplomatic relations, Rainey said in an interview: "Our failure to recognize Russia is an economic crime."
Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the other branch of Congress, advocated Russian recognition last week. Foreign Relations committee has urged that action for years.
The government, however, has taken the position Russia cannot be recognized until it meets certain requirements, including payment of debts to this country and cessation of propaganda activities.
All votes were close. The attempt to remove the oil tax from the bill lost on a tie vote 9 to 9. The lumber duties were rejected 10 to 8.

RESTORATION OF CONFIDENCE BIG NEED SAYS MILLS

lie interest." On top of these came the anti-boarding campaign and the steps for credit expansion. The anti-boarding campaign's results and other evidence, said Mills, indicate clearly that there is a definite, if gradual, return of confidence.
"I have tried to point out that credit and confidence are the magicians that must solve or paradox for us," said Mills. "I have pointed out that progress has been achieved. But it takes time to arrest and reverse these great movements, and while it seems almost cruel to urge patience after an already protracted period of waiting, yet I cannot help but feel that we should use the forces which have been set in motion an opportunity to exert themselves before yielding to doubt as to whether we are on the right path."
"I have seen nothing," he concluded, "even in the darkest hours of doubt, to impair my faith in the promise of American life."
The newspapers of America have not shirked their duty to the public of publishing the news in adequate form, in spite of present conditions," Kent Cooper, General Manager of the Associated Press, said today in his annual report to the board of directors of the association.
Have Had Losses
"To maintain the standards reached in recent years all publishers have had to sustain severe losses," Mr. Cooper said. "Although advertising revenues have fallen off tremendously, circulation has not decreased materially. Sustained circulations in such times show that newspapers have established themselves as a necessity."
Each community requires a complete supply of intelligence, more necessary in times of depression perhaps, than in a prosperous era. To dig themselves out of depression people must think and they can not think unless they are reliably informed. Newspapers have carried on admirably and they have been aided to some extent in doing so, in spite of heavy losses, through increasing reliance upon The Associated Press."

Harding's Editor For Years Retires

Marion, O., Apr. 25—(AP)—Retired to have been the only editor ever to direct the operation of a newspaper for a President of the United States, George H. Van Fleet of the Marion Star retired today after an editorial career of nearly four decades.
For 37 years Van Fleet was connected with the Star, formerly the property of the late President Warren G. Harding, and now one of a group of eight Ohio newspapers owned by Brush-Moore newspapers, Inc. Van Fleet's retirement came just a week after his 69th birthday.
As an executive of the Star, Van Fleet was Harding's closest business associate. He had complete supervision of the paper during the time Harding was in Washington, beginning with the latter's first term as United States Senator in 1914.
Van Fleet became a member of the Star staff in 1895, eleven years after Harding acquired ownership. Starting as a reporter, he later was editor, telegraph editor and managing editor.

AND BE A FRIEND TO MAN
THERE are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the place of their self-content:
There are souls like stars, well apart.
In a fellowless firmament:
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where highways never run—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.
—Sam Walter Foss.

Short Jacket Is Very Popular

Paris, (UP)—Ever since the short evening jacket vogue started it has been gathering momentum and now it looks like we shall have them with us, not only at night, but in modified modes throughout the daytime as well. We have grown to depend on the impression of a jacket on a one-piece dress merely by taking an inch wide tuck down the front and around the sides and back. This method of treatment applies to boleros also, and is even more successful as such.

Annual Convention Of Women Voters

Detroit, April 25—(AP)—Nearly 600 women came to Detroit today for the tenth convention of the National League of Women Voters. Controversial questions to be decided include suggestions that the league support federal legislation for a system of federal, state and local unemployment relief, and state legislation for unemployment compensation as well as workmen's compensation.

Mrs. Belle Sherwin of Cleveland, president of the league, will preside.

A possibility that a stand on birth control may be discussed was seen in statements that a group of delegates is considering a resolution favoring such legislation.

Georgia May Ten Years Old Sunday

Georgia May Eastman, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Eastman, was ten years old Sunday and in the afternoon she entertained young friends at the home of her parents, in honor of the occasion. Music and games were features, and all had an enjoyable afternoon which was completed with the serving of a delicious birthday luncheon. Spring flowers were the attractive decorations. A tempting birthday cake was a feature of the luncheon served with ice cream as the last course. Georgia May received many nice gifts from her friends with best wishes for future happy birthdays.

Delightful Concert By A. M. Rawls Sat., Officers Elected

The Dixon Woman's Club enjoyed a delightful program of music Saturday afternoon by A. M. Rawls of this city, accompanied at the piano by his wife.

The numbers were suitably chosen for the sweet and resonant voice of Mr. Rawls and included many standard favorites. He has been a resident of Dixon for a number of years but has recently opened classes for students in voice after a three year's sojourn in Chicago for study.

Following is the two part program:

Part 1.
"Lullaby" (Berceuse), from Jocelyn, Godard
"Requiem" Homer
"Wayfarer's Night Song" Easthope Martin
"La Donna e Mobile" Verdi
Encore, "The Night Wind" Bail.

Part 2.
"Good-bye" Tosti
"My Mother" Klickmann
"The Open Road" Stuckles
Encore, "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms" Moore

Proceeding the entertainment the necessary business was transacted. Mrs. H. C. Bartholomew told of the helpful work being carried on by the Public Hospital Unit of the Community Service Department.

Mrs. D. C. Bryant announced that tickets for the spring luncheon May 28 would be on sale at the next club meeting.

The annual election was quickly disposed of with the following officers succeeding themselves:

President—Mrs. Louis Pitcher, White.
First Vice Pres.—Mrs. H. A. Marks.
Second Vice Pres.—Mrs. Phil N. Recording Sec. — Mrs. Fred Brauer.
Financial Sec. — Mrs. G. Wimpelberg.
Treasurer — Mrs. L. L. McGinnis.
Mrs. J. N. Weiss the only one completing a two-year term of office, will be succeeded by Mrs. A. C. Bowers, as Corresponding Secretary.

Mrs. Fred Brauer, secretary of the local club was elected as the official delegate to the state convention of federated clubs to be held in Chicago, the latter part of May, with Mrs. Deutsch and Mrs. Bowers as alternates.

Mrs. S. C. Burnham was chosen representative to the district convention to be held the first week in May at Galena. Mrs. Prince and Mrs. Rhodes, alternates.

Mrs. Pitcher, by virtue of her office as president, will be a delegate to both conventions.

The hostesses for the afternoon were: Mesdames Jos. Petersberger, Trombold, Cline, Smith, Thompson, Walker, Deutsch and Leith; Mrs. Petersberger and Mrs. Deutsch presiding at the attractive tea table.

Modish Ideas for the Corn-pickers

Keeping cool in cottons is a grand solution this year to hot-weather problems. And the new meshy lisle weaves add chic and that indefinable scrunchy crispness that makes you feel fresh on the meanest hot day. For days in the sun, there is a lisle mesh frock, with beltline and short-sleeved cuffs made adjustable by ribbed weaves. The collar too is made adjustable. It is a cute dress, easy to wear, easy to launder and pack. For the golfer or the girl who never feels quite right without a jacket, there is a three-piece chalky cotton mesh suit with a tuck-in blouse with close-to-the-throat neckline and buttons down the front. The cardigan also buttons and mesh cuffs hug the wrist. The beret is of the same weave as the suit.

Happy Surprise For John Rebuck

On Saturday evening, April 23rd, a number of friends of Mrs. Anna Ledine gathered at her home, 208 Lincoln Way, the occasion being a surprise for her brother, John Rebuck, who that day celebrated his sixtieth birthday. Dancing and games were enjoyed by the guests after the first passed. A midnight luncheon was served, including a huge birthday cake, which measured 21 by 11 inches, which was cut and enjoyed.

There were about fifty guests in attendance and Mr. Rebuck received a number of nice gifts, accompanied by the best wishes of everyone present. Music for the evening was furnished by Frank Jensen and Harold Horton, "The Dixon Harmony Boys."

Bonelli Sings Here Tonight

Richard Bonelli, famous baritone will appear in the last concert of the season, sponsored by the Dixon Civic Music Association, at the Methodist church at 8 o'clock.

No doubt the attendance will be large, many being expected from other cities, as Bonelli is hailed as one of the leading baritones of the country, today. Combined with a delightful voice is a pleasing personality, which keeps for him the friends he makes with his artistry in singing.

A PLEA FOR SCHOOL MOVIES

Kathleen Norris says that children are more interested in the radio and talkies than they are in studying and this is the truth, of course.

She also suggests that if some of the movie stars worshipped by girls were to say sweetly to them in their rich voices, "Girls never say, 'aint', or 'I been' or 'goin'." Instead of "going" or words to that effect, they would sit up and listen and straighten out their grammar.

Which all comes back to the old argument: "Aren't our methods of education archaic?"

In the old days children studied assiduously, of at least more so than they do now. Why? Because there were no excitements to combat.

Now there is everything on earth interposing itself between children and books—movies, radio, phonographs, cars, sports, toys of all kinds, a perfect assortment of distracting affairs that have shoved the very essence of study into the background.

To be frank, educators of today are up against it. Education itself was enough of a novelty in the old days to be sought for. The very idea of learning, to know more than the next fellow, was itself an incentive. Now everybody is doing it. It is thrust upon every child and the thing that is forced loses its kick and defeats its own purpose from the very beginning.

What then can we do? We can be sensible, take the times into consideration and do what an astute business man would do—harness our bad luck and turn it to account.

Lesson in Films
The facts are, if children are only interested in certain things, then why not turn these enemies of educational advancement to work? I have for years advocated films in school, and I have a lot of company.

It is true that educational films are being produced now in Rochester, New York, and used in progressive communities to advantage. But America is slow in many things. These films are not having the instantaneous support they should have.

The best geography lessons I ever heard were broadcast from a station in Cincinnati by the "Geography Man." I wonder how many school children have heard them over a national hook-up?

We are just too slow, too cautious, or to antiquated, or all of them.

Mrs. Norris speaks of George Arliss in "Alexander Hamilton." How many school children saw it? That picture would fix one historical character and make early history real.

Geography on the screen, history on the screen, physiology, language, spelling—the whole gamut of lessons would take on new life, new interest, and be remembered.

Money? We might use less tile and marble on school buildings and put in a machine and a screen instead. We're happy to try. Why not hurry the happy day?

Miss Hackbarth Hostess at Bridge

On Tuesday evening Miss Ethel Hackbarth entertained the members of the T. N. E. A. Bridge club at her home on N. Hennepin. Miss Hackbarth received the favor for high score, while Miss Edna Mosholder received the consolation favor. Tempting refreshments were served and the guests spent a happy evening.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN DEPUTY GUARDS COURT—

Attleboro, Mass. April 25 — For the first time in Massachusetts history, recently, a woman deputy sheriff did guard duty during a session of the superior court.

The woman, Mrs. Annie M. O'Hare, of this city, was appointed as a deputy sheriff last year, being then first of her sex to hold such an office in New England.

Fierce Tasmanian Wolf Doomed to Extinction?

The Tasmanian wolf is one of the rarest and most extraordinary beasts in the world. The species is said to be nearly extinct, and the few remaining specimens are rigorously protected. The first of the many extraordinary things about the Tasmanian wolf is that it is not a wolf at all, though it looks more like a wolf than anything else. The animal is really more akin to the kangaroo and wallabies, for it has a large pouch to carry the litter of young. Curiously enough, both the male and the female are equipped with one of these pouches. The Tasmanian wolf does not bark, but gives a series of wheezy coughs, and it is said that when pursued it will get up on its hind legs and jump like a kangaroo. They are fierce, and some years ago when they were plentiful there was a bonus of $25 offered for every head, because so much damage was done to sheep and cattle.

THE GIBSON PLAN.

The American proposal for armament reduction, broached the other day at Geneva by Ambassador Hugh Gibson, at least has the merit of tackling the vexing problem of security from an entirely new angle.

Since the World War, practically all attempts to reduce land armaments have come to nothing because certain nations, especially France, have insisted that they must be safe from aggression by possible enemies before they can disarm.

The American proposal, aimed to get around this objection, is simply that the most powerful offensive weapons available be legislated out of existence. If the defense is given an overwhelming preponderance over the offense, it is argued, all nations will be safe from aggression because no one will care to wage a war on the offensive.

Accordingly, it is suggested that heavy mobile guns, tanks and poison gas be abolished.

Back of all of this, of course, there is one single factor; the tremendous increase in the fire power of infantry made possible in the last generation by the development of quick-firing small caliber arms.

At the time of the American Revolution, an infantryman was doing well to get to get off one shot every minute and a half. By the time of the Civil War things were a little better, but two shots a minute still constituted extraordinarily rapid shooting.

Then came the breech-loading, repeating rifle. The infantryman now could fire half a dozen shots a minute without undue haste. On the heels of this came the machine gun, capable of spitting out bullets at a rate better than one a second—and the defense became almost infinitely superior to the offense.

To meet this there came a great development in artillery. If the defending infantry could not be routed by the bayonet, it could be blown out of existence by a heavy barrage, or suffocated in a flood of gas shells. Hand in hand came the tank, to root out and destroy machine gun nests. The old equilibrium of war was at least partially restored.

Now the American proposal urges that the machine gun and automatic rifle be made supreme again. Whether it is accepted or not, it marks an interesting development in the history of warfare.

TRUTH ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES.

When the question of independence for the Philippines comes up, there is one point on which it is important that the people of the United States refrain from deluding themselves. That is the level of culture reached by the people of the islands.

Many Americans conceive of all Filipinos as semi-savage people who indulge in head-hunting, devil-worship and cannibalism in practically all parts of the archipelago except the larger cities. There could be no more mistaken notion than that.

As a matter of fact, there has been a rich culture in the Philippines for more than 300 years. The Filipinos are far more literate and well-informed than the people of the Balkans, for example; their standard indeed runs higher than that in certain states of the American union. Americans who look on all Filipinos as jungle people tragically unready for self-government are simply fooling themselves.

THE WHEAT SITUATION.

Wheat prices in the United States may have been rising recently, but whether a substantial recovery is about to begin will depend largely on the status of Canadian and European wheat crops, according to a bulletin just issued by the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

This bulletin points out that the total wheat supply in the United States this year will be approximately 1,110,000,000 bushels, as compared with a domestic demand of slightly more than 700,000,000 bushels. The winter wheat crop was smaller than last year's, but the spring wheat crop showed a gain, and there is an increase of 62,000,000 bushels in the amount of wheat carried over from the year before.

These figures will hardly provoke excessive optimism. Bumper crops north of the Canadian border and beyond the seas could mean another very difficult year for the wheat growers of the United States.

Roosevelt

Garner Hopes For Victory On Coast

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.

Washington—All the drama and the potentialities of the campaign for presidential nominations in 1932 now center in the fight between Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith.

(Frank, who used to tell the Democrats what a splendid president Al would make, and Al, who urged Frank as his successor for governor of New York. Al has a poor chance of being nominated, but he has publicly implied that Frank is not a fit candidate for the presidency.)

Those two men, the crippled governor and the angry ex-governor, clash in Democratic presidential primaries in three large states during the next fortnight, with 156 convention delegates at stake.

Unless Smith can arouse opposition to Roosevelt to an unexpected degree, Roosevelt, according to the consensus of political experts, will capture California's 44 delegates May 3, bay 60 or more of Pennsylvania's 76 on April 26 while on the same day losing nearly all Massachusetts' 36 to Smith and continue thereafter to pile up convention votes until he reaches the Chicago convention in June with a majority of the 1154 delegates.

That would make Roosevelt's chances of winning the nomination by the necessary two-thirds vote extremely bright, regardless of what Smith might do at the convention. To block him at that point, the Smith-Raskob-Shouse-Hague forces would have to depend on support from leaders in eight or 10 states who have not yet indicated any intense opposition to Roosevelt.

Politicians now tend to discount the anticipated primary results in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, but an upset in the dose might have enormous repercussions and materially change the whole aspect of the Roosevelt-Smith fight one way or the other.

If Roosevelt failed to win a majority of Pennsylvania's delegates, his defeat might mark a turning point to success for the "stop-Roosevelt" movement of the eastern leaders.

The well organized Roosevelt campaign in Pennsylvania will net him 66 of the 76 delegates, according to his leaders there. If he doesn't win that many, according to other reports, he will at least have a substantial majority.

If Smith should lose half the Massachusetts delegates to Roosevelt the psychological and material effect might leave Roosevelt's nomination little more than a formality.

On the other hand, an unexpected Smith victory in California would be a severe, although not necessarily fatal, blow to Roosevelt.

Only a political miracle, such as almost never occurs, could win for Roosevelt in Massachusetts. The state Democratic machine—two U. S. Senators, Walsh and Coolidge; the governor, the state chairman, the national committee—the four Massachusetts Democrats congressmen, all are lined up for Smith, most of all of them on the ballot, as Smith delegates.

Roosevelt's only important political ally there is Mayor Jim Curley of Boston, whose following outside his city isn't so large. Roosevelt's son, Jimmy, has been stumping the state for his father. But the Smith crowd has been directing its fight mainly at Curley and the general opinion is that Roosevelt will be left in the lurch.

Curley has claimed 16 of the 36 delegates for Roosevelt, but other of the governor's supporters don't expect as many, and the impartial guess is that he number Roosevelt can expect is much closer to none at all.

It seems extremely unlikely that the voters will pass up their favorite home politicians—and Al has always been a favorite of Bay State democracy.

California elects its convention delegates at-large by a statewide vote, which means that the winner gets the whole delegation. The names of Roosevelt, Smith and John N. Garner will be on the ticket. This is one of the purest of the remaining primary systems, allowing a clear-cut expression of popular choice.

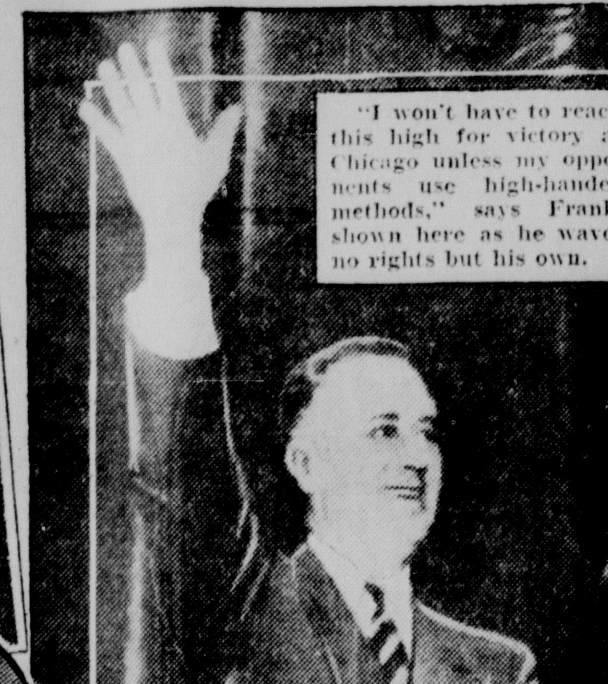

The Garner delegate slate is

Primary Election Battle Now Centers in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, California

"What's this?" says Jack. "They say I can't garner any votes in California?"

"Well, I'm not crowing—but just wait and see what McAdoo can do."

"I won't have to reach this high for victory at Chicago unless my opponents use high-handed methods," says Frank, shown here as he waves no rights but his own.

"Let's put our heads together," says Jack to Al, "and see if we can't stop this fellow Roosevelt."

headed by William G. McAdoo, which brings the wet-dry issue into the campaign to some extent, but the old-time Democratic leaders are mostly supporting Roosevelt, and California Democrats in Washington predict a Roosevelt victory.

A possibility remains that the dries will concentrate behind Garner and McAdoo while Smith and Roosevelt split the Democratic wets to their joint disaster. But the far west has thus far proved one of the Roosevelt strongholds.

Alabama also has a primary May 3, with a Roosevelt delegate slate opposed to a slate running as uninstructed delegates. The latter entered the field at the last moment, however, after giving the Roosevelt forces a chance to get well organized. Present expectations are that Alabama will vote 24 for Roosevelt at the convention. South Dakota has a primary on the same date, but only Roosevelt has filed for her 10 delegates, so he has them sewed up.

Just to bring you up to date, Roosevelt now has 239 delegates instructed, pledged or otherwise definitely in the bag—including South Dakota's. That doesn't count two Roosevelt-instructed delegates from New York, who probably will be voted in a unit with the other 92 from New York for whom ever Tammany Boss John Curley and associated state leader decide to support. Smith hasn't a single delegate.

Senator J. Ham Lewis, of Illinois has his state's 58, which Roosevelt managers say contains much second choice strength for them.

Governor "Alfalfa Bill" Murray has 22 from Oklahoma and one

Smith

"Come to think of it, Massachusetts ought to help me a lot."

from North Dakota. Ex-Senator Jim Reed of Missouri will receive first ballot support from Missouri's 36, who will then be delivered elsewhere by Boss Tom Pendergast.

Louisiana's 20 are uninstructed. So are 18 from Arkansas and six from the Philippines. Roosevelt men say both delegations are as good as theirs.

Bibber and Fire Chief Thomas After May 3, when Roosevelt should have from 365 to 375 delegates, he will need little more than 200 to assure a first ballot to get them in such states as West Virginia, Arkansas, South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, North Carolina, Florida, Oregon, Colorado, Wyoming, Nevada, New Mexico, Montana, Idaho, Connecticut, Kansas and territories.

For a two-thirds majority he will depend on delegates from such presently more or less doubtful states—some of which will go for favorite sons on the first ballot—as New York, Texas, Illinois, Virginia, Louisiana, and Indiana. The backbone of the die-hard Roosevelt opposition, it now seems, will be found among the delegations of New Jersey, Massachusetts, Delaware, Oklahoma, Ohio, Maryland and Rhode Island.

They have only 174 delegates, but the anti-Roosevelt leaders hope to make them a nucleus for a group which can prevent Roosevelt from crossing the two-thirds mark and then start taking delegates away from him after the first three or four ballots.

The rubber horse bounced round and round and soon the little skinny found that he was making all the Tinymites giggle out loud. To them it was a sight to see, as funny as a sight could be. It isn't any wonder that the skinny felt real proud.

Said Scouty, "Say, you're doing fine. I wish that funny horse was mine. I'd ride on him the live-long day and let the others try."

"He's made of rubber. I can't see how you can ride so easily. It is a wonder you don't bounce away up toward the sky."

"Aw, it's not hard when you know how," the skinny said. "I will allow you all to have a little ride, if you don't scare my horse."

"There is a path that leads right through the big tree trunks and I'm sure you can make him follow that long trail. It is a riding course."

"Of course we can," one Tiny said. "We'll make the horse go straight ahead." And then the skinny cried, "All right!" and jumped down to the ground."

Woe Scouty was the first to try to ride the horse and me, oh my, it made him rather dizzy when the horse went round and round. Then Coppy did as he was told. He sat up very brave and bold and loudly walked nice and straight.

Then Windy also had some fun and when his little ride was done Woe Duncy said, "It's my turn now. Geo, I can hardly wait."

He scrambled to the horse's back and gave his side a friendly crack. The rubber horse seemed mad, though and poor Duncy shortly found the others laughing loud in

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CAITON

MARKHAM, AT 80, STILL HAS THE FIRE OF YOUTH

At 80, Edwin Markham is still looking forward. The author of that very great poem, "The Man With the Hoe," has lost little of his fire, none of his hope, none of his universal sympathy or his poet's sense that this world is forever touching borders with an unseen world of infinite wonder.

"New Poems," submitted "Eighty songs at 80," is Mr. Markham's first book of poems to be published in a dozen years. It is issued in commemoration of his 80th birthday—but if the publisher did not announce the fact you would never guess it. There is a spirit of youth in these verses, and no hint of spiritual or physical weakness. Mr.

Markham's songs, in other words, are still very much worth listening to.

The book includes a series of quatrains, a group of sonnets—some of which, incidentally are exceptionally fine—and a short collection of somewhat longer poems. If a few seem rather thin, the general level is remarkably high; and here and there the old, eruptive indignation at the pervasive injustice of human society breaks forth with all its old power. It is impossible, in the space available here, to quote freely from these poems, and that is too bad; for a poet who can write such lines as "The moon of midnight whitening all the seas," and "She will come singing, alighted by a star. From kingdoms where the young Immortals are," is well worth extended quotation.

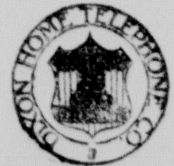

You will find, in brief, some excellent poetry in "New Songs."

8. Expenditures by Localities.—The total of expenditures by the same 16,000 governmental units other than the state are much larger than those by the state. These are by counties, townships, municipalities, school districts, parishes, districts, drainage districts, and cities. Accurate records of expenditures are not available, but a study of the tax levy for different purposes gives a fairly accurate picture of the situation. Cook County levies are not available since 1928, consequently figures for that year will be used. For all purposes in 1928, other than for services financed through special assessments, the tax levies of local governmental units, although special assessments, the total was nearly $370 million. Of this the levy for education purposes was by far the most important. The total of 135 1-2 million dollars was composed of $109,700,000 for district schools, $21,700,000 for community and township high schools, and $4,100,000 for non-high school tax. This levy for education by the local governments was more than the entire expenditure of the state government.

The total levy for city purposes was nearly $100 million. Some of the items for which the sum expended are the general government expenses, police protection, fire protection, police and firemen's pensions. In all cities the expenditures for the protection rendered by police and fire departments ranks next to that for education.

Expenditures for roads and for bridges are made by counties, townships and municipalities. In municipalities the construction of streets is financed largely through special assessment, while the maintenance is financed through tax levy. A tax levy for county highways in 1928 was nearly 2 million dollars while the levy for

Victim Mistaken Identity Freed

Springfield, Ill., Apr. 23.—(AP)—Sam White, alias Will Evans, of Cairo, today was ordered released from Southern Illinois penitentiary by Governor Louis L. Emmerson.

Proved to be a victim of mistaken identity, White was dismissed from prison after serving since 1912. He was sentenced on a charge of assault for a term of 99 years, but testimony recently produced in his behalf showed that he, accompanied by his brother, was robbing a freight car at the time the assault was committed.

Warden James H. White of Southern Illinois prison, recommended executive clemency. The Warden said White has been a model prisoner.

She said she, not Mrs. Keith-Miller, was Clarke's fiancée.

Lancaster was released only to be re-arrested by federal officers for questioning about a plan to smuggle narcotics into the United States from Mexico by airplane. The federal authorities freed him yesterday saying they are certain he had no knowledge or part in the plot.

Clarke was found fatally wounded in his bedroom in Mrs. Keith Miller's home here several days ago where he and Lancaster were

He was shot a few hours after he and Mrs. Keith-Miller told Lancaster of their plans to marry. Both fliers expressed the belief he shot himself.

Famous in 5 3-5 Seconds

And now it's a new world record in rope-climbing. Norman Parrish of the Los Angeles Athletic Club went up a 25-foot rope hand-over-hand in 5 3/5 seconds. Of course Norman didn't have a man on his back, as is shown above, when he made his record climb. He will climb for Uncle Sam in the Olympic games this summer.

Hooks and Slides

BY WILLIAM BRAUCHER
This is a sermon, rewritten into a picture. It started out to be something oratorical and serious, concerned with the builders of the pyramids of Cheops. Thousands of slaves, you know, went down to their dreary deaths that those proud Egyptian pyramids might rise. They put their galled shoulders to those great stones and pushed their hearts out that the crushing weight might move.

From that point it was intended to draw a parallel to the men who today are toiling up the steep hill to yesterday, rolling the stone so heavy with the ponderous weight of years. That would have been a very touching figure of speech, now wouldn't it?

WEEP NO MORE!
But that is the sad side of the combat that is going on which no remote or forgotten nook and cranny of the sports world is immune these days. It is too deadly serious, and that which is too deadly serious is more than likely to be dull.

Why not, after all, give a great big hand to these men who are trying to roll their weary years up hill to the lost pinnacle? Their job is tragic and trying enough, without spewing a sermon at them every time they pause for breath. The trail echoes their tread these days—Dempsey, Travers, Enns, Sande, Lacoste, Wethered, and a hundred lesser lights (not to forget Long, George Kelley, recalled from the minors to serve the Brooklyn Dodgers at first base). Who are we to keep stepping on their heels and croaking "It can't be done! They never come back," and similar dreary cries?

These men, and Miss Wethered, may be a trifle antique, and all that, but even an antique has color and life. Dempsey has held much of his old glamour, even though his quaking legs may have creaked under the demands put upon them during his recent tours. Well, is there someone present who will get up and save the two bucks charged for exhibition performance?

Yesterdays Johnson sent him against the A's again. This time the young right hander went the route, held the A's to seven scattered hits while Washington hit George Earnshaw and Joe Bowman for 14 safeties, and won 9 to 2. Carl Reynolds drove in four Senator runs.

Detroit's amazing Tigers managed to keep a half game ahead of the Senators for the American League lead by scoring eight runs in the last two innings to conquer the Chicago White Sox, 10 to 9. George Pipras pitched the New York Yankees to an easy 9 to 2 verdict over the Boston Red Sox. Pipras allowed only six hits and struck out an even dozen.

Earl Averill, Cleveland outfielder, came out of a batting slump to die in seven runs with two home runs and a double as the Indians walloped the St. Louis Browns 14 to 3.

In the National League, the pace setting Boston Braves won their sixth consecutive game, noosing out the Phillies, 2 to 1, in a tight pitcher's duel between Ed Brandt and Ray Benge. The Braves won out in the sixth on Spohrer's single, a walk, a sacrifice and another single by Red Worthington, accounting for both runs.

The Cubs, close behind the Braves in the standings, unleashed a 16-hit barrage that buried the Pittsburgh Pirates 12-3. Glenn Spencer had the doubtful distinction of pitching the whole game for the Pirates despite the heavy Cub cannonading. Charley Root stopped the Corsairs with seven hits.

Behind Carl Hubbell's five hit pitching, the New York Giants formances was too much, compared to the $50 the same seat would have sold for a few years ago?

DIG DOWN, FELLERS
To many followers of golf, Jerry Travers has been for years a dusty legend. Now he is returning to activity as a professional, cashing in you might say on the heroism of his storied, though financially unrewarded, back-ground. Isn't old Jerry Travers, battling with our modern fairway machines, stirring enough for at least the price of a loaf?

Earl Sande, a wrinkled gnome from an older world, crouched low over the sweating neck of a thoroughbred, chanting some impromptu melody into the horse's ear as the pack comes steaming down the stretch—are you going up to the man and say, "See here! Sande, cut all this out. You're really too old for this sort of stuff!"

HOW DOES HE DO IT?
Buddy Enns was a great jockey a few years back. But he loved the lights of Broadway when they were flaring, and the lights of Broadway, when they flare, are hard on the eyes. It came to the point where Enns, lifted into the saddle of the horse he was supposed to ride, often would fall off on the other side. He was barred, and for years hovered on the frayed border of the turf land where, sober, he might have dwelt in honor.

They gave Buddy "one more chance." And why not? If he can stick on the back of one of those hide-and-hair juggernauts, guiding his galloper unswervingly through slippy mud or choking dust, plunging up to the wire first with a last-minute sprint that his unerring judgment of space had saved for the stretch—if he can do all that after the flushed nights and blurred days of his incredible career isn't he a pretty fair sort of country rider, after all?

These men are aware every minute that the odds they are fighting are tremendous. But if there is enough of the old punch, skill and color left—and enough of the old fight—well, they can still go for me!

In seven runs against the Browns with two homers and a double. Gerald Walker, Tigers—Clouted White Sox pitching for four singles.

Monte Weaver, Senators—Stopped Athletics, 3 to 2, with seven hits. George Pipras, Yankees—Held Red Sox to six hits, fanned 12. Red Worthington, Braves—His single in sixth drove in both runs as Braves beat Phils, 2 to 1. Carl Hubbell, Giants—Held

"GALLANT SIR" BECOME DARK HORSE OF RACE

Figures On the Candidates for Kentucky Derby Are Altered

Louisville, Ky., Apr. 25—(AP)—Gallant Sir is now the standout "dark horse" in the prospective 1932 Kentucky Derby field. Norman W. Church's eligible has attracted considerable following since he arrived from the far west after a successful campaign at the Tanforan track.

The long trip to Louisville had slight effect on this sturdy son of Sir Galahad III, which sired Gallant Fox, victor in the 1930 derby. Gallant Sir has not been breezed as yet, but has been put through long gallops at Churchill Downs to shake the kinks out of his muscles. Gallant Sir has replaced as "chief dark horse" another Sir Galahad III colt, Liberty Limited. "The Limited" has moved up among the favorites by virtue of brilliant workouts at the Downs, and his winter book odds have dropped from 100 to 1 to 10 to 1. Gallant Sir is held at 20 to 1 in the future books at present.

Liberty Limited, owned by the Three D's stable, revealed yesterday he can run in the mud as well as on a fast track. He breezed the quarter distance of a mile and a quarter in 2:16 2-5, hard held. The track was sloppy after a heavy rain, and the colt ran in the center of the track, not near the rail as is usual.

DERBY CANDIDATES
I Pass, E. R. Plunkett—Ran third in Allowance race for three year olds over futurity course at Lexington.

Hoops W. F. Knebelcamp—Finished third in Allowance race at Lexington. Epithet, the winner, set track record.
Also Ran—J. Hal Woodford's Heavy Sugar, C. W. Moore's Screem, T. P. Hayes' Easy at Lexington; Barry Vail Stable's Depart at Havre de Grace.

Injuries Cripple Cubs As Per Usual

Chicago, April 25—(AP)—Chicago's Cubs must do their battling for the leadership of the National League for the next month without the potent bat and dependable fielding of Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler.

The fleet centerfielder yesterday suffered a fracture of the small toe of his left foot, while rounding first base in the first inning. Johnny Moore, who replaced him, came up with a single, walk and a home run, and will be in center until Cuyler recovers.

WHITE SOX AND CLEVELAND MAKE TRADE ON SUNDAY

Swap Of Players Is Expected to Benefit Both Outfits

Cleveland, Apr. 25—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox added new strength today by one of the American League's biggest player trades in several years.

The deal, announced last night sends Shortstop Chalmers (Bill) Cissell and Pitcher Jim Moore to the Indians in exchange for Second Baseman Johnny Hodapp and Outfielder Bob Seeds.

Cissell, once known as "Chicago's $123,000 beauty," is expected to give the Tribe one of the tightest-fielding inner-gardens in the league, while Hodapp and Seeds were sought by the Sox for their punch at the plate.

Chicago bought Cissell from Portland in 1927 for $75,000 cash and players valued at $48,000. He is 28, fast and clever, and has a four-year batting average of .261. The Tribe may use him either at second base or shortstop.

Seeds is considered one of the most promising young outfielders in the game, and is likely to hit above .300. Hodapp, a veteran, has a five-year average of .320, but is believed past the zenith of his career.

Cissell will find two former Sox team-mates when he joins the Tribe. Willy Kamm who cost Chicago $100,000 in 1923, at third base, and Pitcher Sarge Connally. Kamm came to the Indians last year in trade for Lew Fonseca, now manager of the Sox.

All of the four in the newest trade were ordered to report to their new owners today. Moore possibly will be sent back to the minors within the next few weeks.

TODAY IS THE WORLD WAR ANNIVERSARY

BRITISH SWEPT BACK

On April 23, 1918, German troops occupied a part of Mont Kemmel, one of the key positions in the Lys sector, after a day of heavy fighting with the British and French troops.

French troops were forced out of Hangard by fresh German shock troops.

Fighting of great intensity continued, with German gains being small, on the entire Lys front. Five new German divisions were in the battle, allied officials said.

British counter-attacks regained some of the ground lost early in the day, but pressure on the entire British front was very great. Germany sent an ultimatum to Holland demanding the right to transport certain supplies not used in war through Dutch territory.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — (AP) — President Hoover's most recent addition to his official family—Ogden Mills, successor to "Uncle Andy" Mellon as Secretary of the Treasury—is demonstrating to Washington a new way to deal with Senate committees.

Cabinet members have had quite a bit of difficulty in their appearances "on the hill" during this congress.

The debonair Pat Hurley, Secretary of War, was so angered during hearing on a Philippine independence bill that he walked out, saying that he didn't have to put up with such treatment.

And Secretary Adams of the Navy was so injured at an insinuation in the house naval affairs committee hearing of disloyalty to the President that his voice showed evident emotion.

But none of them seem to have been able to get under Mills' skin. In fact, if the truth were known, it is probably Mills who is getting under the senatorial skin.

The Clash Comes

The secretary has been making trips to the capitol lately to give the senate finance committee his counsel on the revenue bill which has been drafted to balance the budget.

On this committee, serving as the ranking Democrat is Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, a notorious baiter of Republicans. It was almost inevitable that so good a republican as the secretary and so good a democrat as Harrison would clash sooner or later.

And they did—in such fashion as to delight those who saw.

Harrison wanted Mills to submit an administration program that it had been done to the raising revenue. Mills replied Ways and Means Committee of the House weeks ago—and hinted that the Mississippi senator was trying to play politics.

When Harrison kept demanding that "a specific bill carrying out what you think should be enacted" be given to the committee, Mills looked at him and said with a laugh:

"All right, I'll call it the Harrison bill."

He Won't Be Icked

All the time that he and the senator were sparring at each other Mills strode up and down along the committee table quietly amused. He would stop and light his cigar, stroll over to the window and look out. He would stick his thumbs in his vest pocket and smile broadly.

Mills declines to be icked by inquisitive members of congress on such occasions.

Senator Brookhart, independent Republican from Iowa and a man who says what he thinks when and where he pleases, seems to look at the game of politics rather cold-bloodedly.

He is an expert rifle shot and has spent years teaching men how to hit the bulls-eye. His glint along the sights of a rifle is somewhat akin to that which he turns to politics.

The senator comes up for reelection this year. He must first win the Republican nomination and then defeat a Democrat in November, if he hopes to remain in the Senate after next March.

Among those opposing him in the primary is an old friend from Shenandoah, Iowa, by the name of Henry Field.

Field owns a radio station in Iowa over which he has repeatedly invited Brookhart to speak. When he decided to make the race against the senator he wrote him suggesting that since they had been good friends why not make of their campaign a "friendly affair."

Brookhart Objects

Field told Brookhart that he could use his radio as before. More than that he could eat "chicken stew with Mrs. Field and myself at the cottage."

"Let's have a campaign," Field suggested, "conducted on a high plane of courtesy and good fellowship."

Brookhart balked. That is not his way of campaigning.

He wrote Field that such a thing was impossible. Political enemies of them both he said, had been responsible for Field coming out against him.

He thanked him for the tender of his radio station, but said that after all it was not necessary. The law entitled equal opportunity in this respect to all candidates.

No, he couldn't agree to such a proposition—even with a friend. As far as he was concerned it would be every man for himself. He had had a stiff fight to get to the Senate. He was prepared to put up a stiff fight to remain there.

Not Kidding

Brookhart wasn't kidding about having to put up a stiff fight to get to the Senate. The memory of that struggle lingers with him and still rankles.

Back in 1922, he was elected to fill an unexpired term. Two years later he claims that he was re-elected for a full term, received the certificate of election certified by the executive council of Iowa, but was refused his seat by the Senate.

It was a prolonged contest, which ended in Steck, a Democrat being seated. However, Brookhart turned around and defeated Iowa's other Senator in the general election, and got a seat anyway.

With that experience yet in his mind, a campaign "conducted on a high plane of courtesy and good fellowship" seems not his idea of the best campaign at this time.

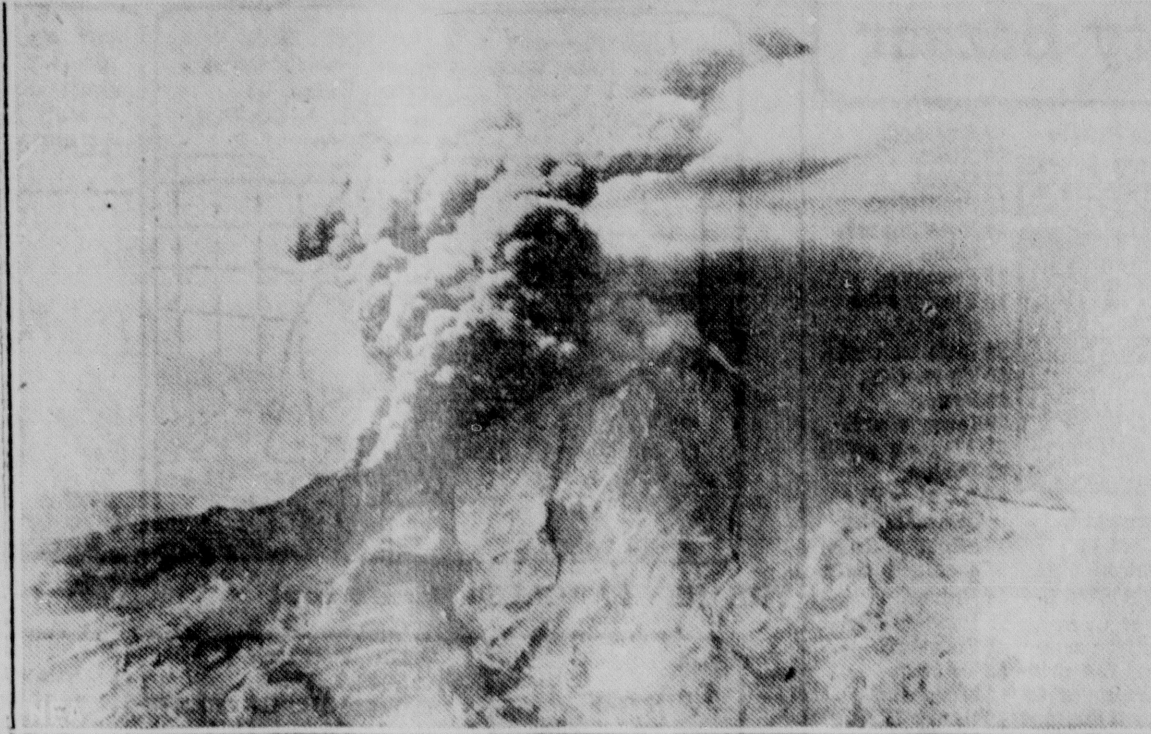

CHILDREN SAVE MOTHER

Fort Worth, Tex.—A two-year sentence against Mrs. R. F. Fowler was suspended by Federal Judge James C. Wilson when the mother testified she sold whiskey to support five children after her husband had been sentenced to the penitentiary for forgery.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN VOLCANOES COVER HALF A CONTINENT WITH ASHES

AS IF SHOVELING AWAY SNOW AFTER A STORM, workmen swarmed into the streets of Curico, Chile, to clear the pavement of tons of ashes which fell upon the town from erupting Tinguiriraco volcano, 75 miles away. Strange scenes like this were duplicated in scores of South American cities as craters along a 400-mile belt thundered into awesome activity raining ashes, smoke and gases over a widespread area. Note the blanket of volcanic ash upon the branches of trees.

ROARING INTO TERRIFYING ACTIVITY, towering volcanoes of the South American Andes presented this fearsome aspect, recently, as they poured forth clouds of ashes and gaseous fumes upon town and countryside for a distance of 400 miles. This Dixon Evening Telegraph-NEA Service picture strikingly shows the thundering volcano Las Yeguas in full eruption. Thousands in Chile and Argentine fled from their homes as the volcanoes filled the skies with aerial explosions.

ARE YOU DOWNHEARTED? THEN READ THIS STORY OF A MAN WHO MADE A MILLION, LOST IT, WENT BACK TO BRICKLAYING, AND IS HAPPY ABOUT IT.

By DEXTER TEED

New York. — (NEA Service) — "I can take it," says John J. Meehan.

Meehan did take it. He was close to a millionaire in the boom days when he had the masonry contract on the $30,000,000 Hotel New Yorker. He lost everything when business turned tough.

Now, only 37 years old, he is back where he started—working as a bricklayer. And if you think this horny-handed, red-headed Irishman is down hearted and discouraged you don't know Jack Meehan.

Gangway!

"I've got the edge on the other fellows, and I am coming back," declares Meehan, atop the 27th story of a big insurance company building being erected near Madison Square.

"Laying brick has put me in good physical and mental condition. I feel fine better than I have in years. Just as soon as things pick up a little — and I think they show signs already—I am going after the big jobs again and you can bet I'll get 'em." Before he lost his money Meehan rode to work in a car behind a chauffeur. Now he rides on the subway, in his old clothes, with a peaked hat crowning his flaming hair. He remarks humorously: "I'll be riding in a Rolls-Royce yet."

"Feel unhappy? Well, I should say not," is his assertion. "This has been the greatest lesson I ever learned. I was flying high and I took a nice tumble. Didn't appreciate what I had, but I'll hold on to my money now. I've taken it to heart."

Bricks, Buddies

Bricks and Meehan have been buddies all his life. He started over on the West Side in the days when all good Irishmen fought for the fun of it. Tossing "Irish confetti" was a pastime and many of the brick that was thrown at or by young Jack Meehan. As a young man he started tossing them on top of high walls—for money—and became a good bricklayer.

When he was only 21 he worked on the Pennsylvania Station. By the time he was 30 he was the head of the John J. Meehan Corporation. Money came in fast. He built apartment houses and other big buildings. Finally he was awarded the $2,000,000 masonry contract on the Hotel New Yorker, and when that was finished he was in the big money.

The red-faced Irish kid was then a budding young millionaire. He never smoked nor drank, and he was raising a family.

Some of the corporations he worked for went broke. He had to pay his bills; he couldn't collect. "Then I lost a nice roll in Wall Street," he admits now, very sheepishly.

For nearly a year he tried to straighten out his tangled finances. It was no use. Then he was idle for six months — and four months ago he took his union card out of moth balls and looked for a job. He got it, for many remembered that Jack Meehan was a good bricklayer.

"Felt better right away," says Jack. "Soon as I got my hands on a few bricks I forgot all about my troubles."

Beside him work men he had hired when his weekly payroll on the Hotel New Yorker was $90,000. They kidded him; he laughed and joked right back at them.

Recently he was promoted to assistant to the foreman, at $85

a week. He grows eloquent when prohibition is mentioned:

"Before prohibition men laid three times as many bricks at one-third the wages. They lapped up a pile of beer and worked like beavers. Now they drink poison booze and act as if they were paralyzed."

"This, from the non-drinker, Jack Meehan."

"Losing everything tests the mettle of a man," is Meehan's last words. "Coming back is a question of mental condition and age. Lots of men can come back if they only think they can. I'm on my way — and I'm enjoying it, too."

Mary Devaney and sister Ruth. Mrs. Carl Brenner of Dixon spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Jennie Angle.

Miss Annabelle McGrath entertained one of the W. R. C. circles at her home Friday evening. The evening was spent in playing 500.

Mrs. Leon Roberts won high score. Homer Wright came out from Chicago Friday evening to visit friends. He left Saturday evening for Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moats spent Friday afternoon in Dixon.

The members of the Ministerial Association gave a farewell luncheon at the Coffee Shop Friday in honor of Rev. S. G. Eberly who has been transferred to Chadwick. He served as pastor of the local Evangelical church for the past six years.

Mrs. Riley Irvin returned home Thursday from Dixon where she had been on professional duty for several weeks.

Daily Health Talk

CAUSES OF MALNUTRITION

The sooner malnutrition is recognized and corrected, the greater are the chances for a child complete recovery. The effects of a long-continued or severe malnutrition may never be overcome completely.

What are some of the causes of malnutrition? We must remember that every movement a child makes and every bit of work it does require energy, and this energy must be furnished by food. There must be a sufficient supply. It must be of the proper kind, well balanced, with the proper amount of vegetables and fruits. Children who receive no leafy vegetables and practically no milk nor eggs may fail to grow normally because they receive an insufficient amount of vitamins, minerals and adequate proteins.

Then there must be proper habits of eating. The hours must be regular, the food must be eaten slowly and be washed down with water and milk. Indigestible foods together with faulty habits of eating may help to cause malnutrition.

Insufficient sleep is a cause of malnutrition in some children. Experiments with malnourished children have shown that even after the diet has been regulated children do not gain properly unless their hours of sleep are sufficient and regular. Late hours for children and excitement in the evenings may help to weaken the already lowered resistance of the child.

Chronic fatigue brought about by too strenuous or too long continued physical activity in work, in play, or in school athletics, combined with too little sleep, may be the chief cause of malnutrition. Yet the child must have some exercise.

Certain physical conditions such as diseased and enlarged adenoids and tonsils, decayed teeth, tuberculosis, and syphilis, are causes of malnutrition in some children.

Children suffering from malnutrition are more susceptible to infectious diseases than other children. If a child who is being given proper and sufficient food and who is getting sufficient sleep and rest loses weight or does not steadily gain in weight, or if he shows other symptoms of undernourishment he should be taken to the family physician for examination.

CLEAN AIR FOR HEALTH

Students of medical history frequently are impressed by the manner in which certain basic ideas appear and re-appear in the progress of medicine.

In the oldest of medical writings miasma and malaria, or bad air, were held to be responsible for various plagues.

People shut their windows at night to keep out "injurious night air" and they literally sealed their homes against the winter climate.

With the growth of modern science and the discovery of germs, the idea of polluted air as a possible cause of epidemic-like diseases was largely abandoned.

In recent times, however, clean air has again come to the fore as a medical item.

In this connection the Belgian death-dealing fog that stirred the world a year or so ago has brought to our attention a new source of danger.

In the Meuse valley a noxious gas emitted by numerous factories in the territory, in combination with fog and the lack of air currents, cost the lives of 60 persons.

In various parts of the world, too it has been noted that in communities where the air is contaminated by smoke and noxious gases, there is an excessively high prevalence of pneumonia, bronchitis and other respiratory diseases.

The pollution of the air with smoke, gases and dust cannot be entirely charged to industrial establishments.

Many a city is robbed of the lighter ultra-violet light present in winter sunlight by the dense smoke emanating from homes that burn soft coal improperly.

The relationship of polluted air to health is not as easily appreciated as the evil effects of the pollution of milk.

There is, however, fortunately, a growing consciousness of the importance of having a clear atmosphere, and many communities are taking steps to safeguard the air they breathe.

MASSIE'S TRIAL MAY REACH JURY LATE ON TUESDAY

Third Alienist To Be the Last Witness For Prosecution

Honolulu, Apr. 25 — (AP)—The insanity plea of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, on trial with three others for the slaying of a native, faced a final attack today by another expert in the workings of the human mind.

To the testimony of two physicians that Massie was not insane when he slew Joseph Kahahawai, whom he was convinced criminally attacked Mrs. Massie, the prosecution was prepared to add the testimony of a third—Dr. Joseph Catton, Stanford University psychiatrist.

Dr. Catton was to take the witness stand to again stress to the jury of mixed racial origin the prosecution's contention the Hawaiian was slain by a sane man, killing with revenge in his heart. The defense contends the United States naval officer became temporarily insane while trying to obtain a confession that would restore his wife's good name.

State's Last Witness

Dr. Catton is the last witness by which Public Prosecutor John C. Kelley hopes to send Massie his society matron, mother-in-law Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two Navy enlisted men, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, to prison.

With the defense resting upon Massie's plea of temporary insanity, Kelley has concentrated upon trying to convince the jury that he was not insane, for, under Hawaiian law, if Massie is innocent by reason of insanity, then all of the defendants are innocent.

The defense, headed by 75-year-old Clarence Darrow, produced two expert witnesses who testified Massie was mentally deranged.

The state hoped to complete its rebuttal with Dr. Catton's testimony and attorneys believed the case would reach the jury not later than tomorrow.

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

"If any of you ever see your old man on the street, point him to a cop."

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

THE INDIANS

RELIEVED THAT THE SOUL LEFT THE BODY THROUGH THE MOUTH, AND THAT AN INDIAN WHO DIED OF STRANGULATION WOULD BE CUT OFF, FOREVER, FROM THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS.

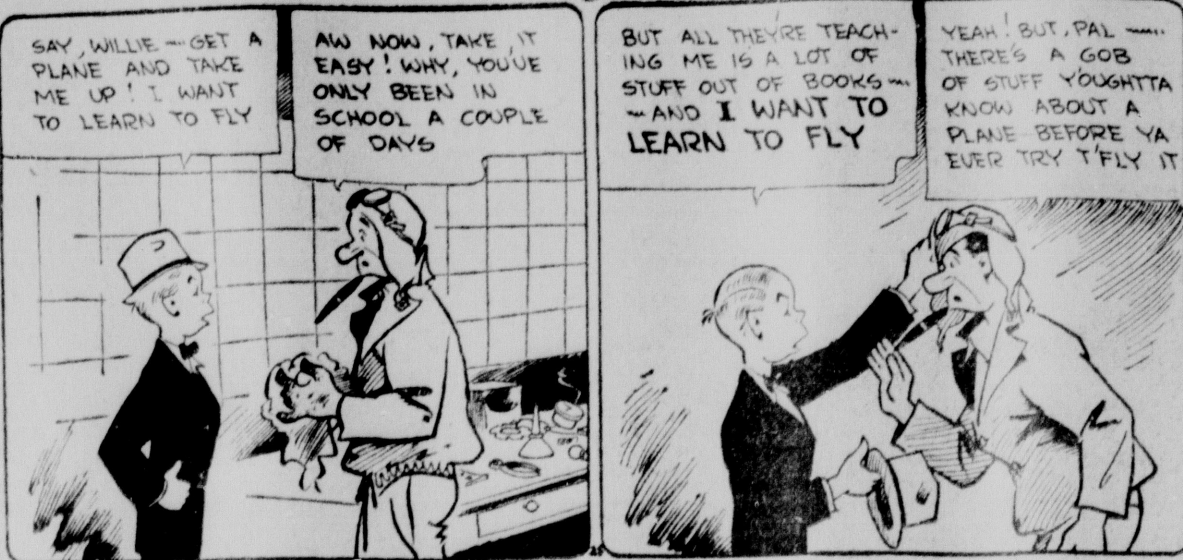

EROSION HAS CHANGED THE SURFACE OF THE EARTH MORE THAN THE COMBINED EFFORTS OF EARTHQUAKES, VOLCANOES, TORNADOES, LANDSLIDES, AND GLACIERS.

A TOOTH

IS THE ONLY PART OF THE BODY THAT CANNOT REPAIR ITSELF.

The Indian preferred almost any other form of death to that of being strangled. Since the red men thought that the soul took flight through the mouth, strangulation, they believed, would force the soul to remain on earth with the body instead of entering the warrior's heaven. Erosion goes about its work quietly, but because it is going on constantly, it gets results. The Grand Canyon of the Colorado is one of the outstanding examples of what erosion can do. Earthquakes, volcanoes, landslides, and the like, can make great alterations in small areas, but the face of the earth, as a whole, has undergone few changes because of them.

THE OLD COUNSELLOR'S COLUMN

The Investment Viewpoint

You must retain the investment viewpoint if you mean to operate as an investor rather than as a speculator. Let me illustrate that.

Suppose some one tells you of a certain six per cent bond and claims that it is very cheap at its present price, say, it is selling at sixty. You are told that the bond should be selling at seventy-five before long. If you buy the bond on that basis entirely, you are obviously animated by the prospect of making a quick profit of fifteen points—or twenty-five per cent on the turn-over of your capital. If you do that you are clearly speculating. Perhaps I should say plainly, you are gambling, since you may have given very little consideration to the security behind the bond. You were not thinking of holding it over to some one else later on at a higher price. That is the way most people bought stocks during the boom days.

On the other hand, suppose you buy the same six per cent bond after thoroughly satisfying yourself that it meets your requirements. You buy it first of all because it appears well secured; secondly because there is every indication that interest will continue to be paid at the rate of six per cent on the par value (yielding over ten per cent on the value you actually invest in the bond); and thirdly because the bond obviously appears to be undervalued.

You reason that if the bond is sound, the principal and interest will be paid when due. There would then be a nice increase in the value of the investment. But price enhancement is the secondary consideration in your purchase. The first consideration is the generous amount of well secured income offered by that bond at the low price at which you can buy it.

If you buy on that basis you are making an investment; if you buy the bond with the idea of selling it as soon as you can at a higher price you are speculating.

Considering the financial experiences of most everybody during the last few years it would seem that the majority would now be inclined toward conservative investment rather than speculation. But, very few people are content to realize that the money they have lost in securities, real estate and commodities is really lost.

In the economic cataclysm, the good suffered with the bad. Virtually nothing has been immune to the terrific shock of world-wide deflation. Rather than striving to recover losses as soon as possible it would be much better for each one to start rebuilding his financial situation on a safe and solid foundation.

Prissy's Quest

By HELEN ST. BERNARD

THE Wednesday afternoon Ladies' Aid society of Midhill was stunned into silence. Eleven pairs of hitherto busy hands were idle. Eleven flannelized night gowns for the small inmates of the Orphan's asylum were forgotten. The twelfth member of the "Aid," Priscilla Pratt, was standing at the door, her hand on the knob, her round face flushed, her eyes shining. In her other hand, she held some gaily colored, descriptive circulars, the covers of which bore a picture of a diminutive steamer.

"Think of it," and her voice was husky with emotion. "Four months of romance! Panama-Honolulu-Japan! Cherry blossom time in Japan! India—and the Taj Mahal! Egypt! The Nile and the Pyramids! Italy and Vesuvius—Venice! St. Marks and the pigeons! Monte Carlo and the Rock of Gibraltar! Mine . . . for . . . four . . . whole . . . months!"

Prissy had read the literature of "The Golden Tour" thoroughly. Mrs. Carruthers, the minister's wife, was the first to speak.

"We are glad you had the money left by your uncle, Prissy. You have worked so hard taking care of your folks. Getting along in years . . . and never having married. Money . . ."

The newly made heiress started to button on her coat, her eyes traveling from face to face. "Yes, all that! Getting along in years . . . never having married . . . and that is why I am going to spend part of the money Uncle Charlie left me . . . going around the world! I'm going to see things!"

Priscilla Pratt, the staid demure little spinster of Midhill—going around the world!

"A trip around the world!" and Mrs. Smiley clicked her teeth. "My, my. If you should change your mind, Prissy, you might take a nice little trip down to Pittsburgh. It's only a day's ride from here, and there are lots of theaters and pictures and big stores."

"I am going around—the world! You don't understand, none of you! I want romance! Something I have never had."

John Blake, Midhill's carpenter, was a regular caller at Prissy's little cottage on Main street. He lived across the apple orchard in the home he had built many years before, when he had first asked Prissy to marry him. John had always made things easy for Prissy. He had told her at that time, that he would wait—always.

Prissy had the circulars ready to show John when he came that night.

"Winter has set in now, Prissy, and you'd better get in another ton of coal while Jeff has it. And I told Watkins to leave you a few of his Hubbard squash when he passes . . ."

"I don't coal. John . . . nor any of the squash, although his squashes are fine, I know."

John looked up quickly. "No?"

"You have been a good, true friend, John . . . and I have thought, perhaps, some day I could repay you for all your kindness."

"It's been nothing, Prissy," John was embarrassed. "You remember what I told you twenty years back? When you were ready to come to me . . . I'd be waiting? I ain't changed, Prissy . . ."

"I know, John. Life has been hard for me . . . and it would have been harder if it hadn't been for you."

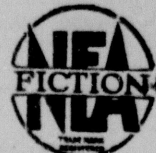

John hitched his chair closer and leaned forward. He placed his big hand over hers. His voice was gentle: "Prissy, life is hard . . . if you haven't any one to care for . . . or care for you. Hard and lonely. And I love you just the same."

Prissy reached out for her sewing that lay on the window seat. She dropped it over the gaily colored circulars in her lap and her hands were folded on top of it; idle, just as eleven pairs of hands had lain idle that afternoon on sewing, at the Aid society. She met John's kind gray eyes, so near. He smiled at her.

"I'll do my best to make you happy, Prissy. I'll try to bring all

SUSAN CAREY, an orphan, lives with her Aunt Jessie on Chicago's west side and works in the office of ERNEST HEATH, architect. BEN LAMPMAN, a moody young admirer, takes her to a studio party where she meets ARNOLD and SONIA STRINSKY and DENISE ARNOLD, a society girl. Later, lunching with BOB DUNBAR, young millionaire whom she met at business school, she sees Denise again. JACK WARREN, Heath's assistant, tries to flirt and is rebuffed. Lonely when her aunt is away, Susan goes on a party with Waring and he kisses her. Ben asks her to marry him and she temporizes. Her employer's wife snubs her. Susan hears Bob Dunbar is to be married and is heart-broken. Denise Ackroyd asks her to come to a second party at her country home. ROSE WILTON, Susan's friend, lends her a party frock.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIII

IF Susan had known her aunt's plans she would have been furiously angry. As it was she met Ben gayly the following afternoon. He came through the coach looking rather more sulky than usual but almost pathetically brushed and tidy.

"Hello," she said. "We're bound for the same place."

"I guess so," Ben threw a shabby black bag into the rack overhead and sat down. Moodily his gaze took her in, from the top of her new brown felt to the tip of her hair.

"You look nice," was all he could find to say, and that rather grudgingly.

Susan thanked him, reflecting sardonically that he was scarcely the perfect pattern of an ardent admirer. Poor Ben! On a piano keyboard his fingers spoke the only language that he knew. Otherwise he was inarticulate.

"I don't know why I said I'd come to this racket," Ben grumbled. "Sonia forced me into it—said it would be good for my work."

"Maybe it will," Susan told him, determined to look on the bright side of things this glorious fall day. With the morning her misgivings had dissolved, leaving her confident and happy.

Ben stared at her. "You know why we're asked, don't you?" he demanded. "That kid thinks we're a bunch of freaks. When she comes down to Sonia's she believes she's slumming and gets a terrible kick out of it. She told Sonia it reminded her of the Left Bank."

"I don't think that sounds so bad," Susan said. "What she means is you're all artists and artists have always been taken up by rich people. That's not new."

Then the conductor called the name of their station.

Susan reminded herself that there was nothing really to be excited about, but as she followed Ben down the steps her heart was pounding painfully. They trailed along the platform, feeling strange and conspicuous. A uniformed man came up to them, touching his cap.

"For Miss Ackroyd?"

Ben nodded. Silently they climbed into the great gray car.

"Just a minute, sir. There are two others expected. I will look

Ben snorted. "Where do you come in, then? You don't classify."

The instant he had said the words he regretted them. Susan winced as if she had been struck and truly the blow had gone home. The question was one she had asked herself many times but this morning she had determined to put aside and be as happy as possible. She felt a surge of hatred for Ben who, observing the darkening of her eyes and trembling of her lip, cursed himself for the clumsy fool he was.

Susan turned and stared out the window. They were slipping past little houses now, their backyards running down to the railroad's right of way. It was all very suburban and sunny but it looked black to the girl.

Ben's hand touched hers. She drew away as though stung. Humbly he said, "I'm sorry. I didn't mean that. They may ask us where we're freaks but of course anyone could be glad to have you, so beautiful."

This from Ben! She looked at him dazed. The words had been wrong from him by main force but they still hovered in the air. Susan could forgive him anything for that.

"Near Lind. It's all right," she assured him. "The trouble with you is you have an inferiority complex and go about expecting people to dislike you. You have a chip on your shoulder and someone's bound to knock it off."

She felt mature and capable, giving advice. By tacit consent the disagreeable subject was avoided thereafter. They talked about the orchestra Ben was working with then. Susan told him about her job. The minutes flew. Ben kept glancing back over his shoulder now and then, muttering, "I wonder where Sonia and Arnold went. They said they'd be on this train."

Then the conductor called the name of their station.

Susan reminded herself that there was nothing really to be excited about, but as she followed Ben down the steps her heart was pounding painfully. They trailed along the platform, feeling strange and conspicuous. A uniformed man came up to them, touching his cap.

"For Miss Ackroyd?"

Ben nodded. Silently they climbed into the great gray car.

"Just a minute, sir. There are two others expected. I will look for them," the man said. He shut the door, leaving the boy and girl alone in the jewel box interior of that fabulous motor car. Ben stretched his legs and whistled softly. Susan sat up very straight and looked dignified. Nearly all the cars that had met their train had roared away around the curve when the car returned with the bedraggled Strinskys trailing in his wake.

If politics had not forbade Susan would have gazed at Sonia's appearance. She wore a turtle-neck sweater, a brilliant orange. Beneath this flared out a pleated skirt of green and black checked wool, braver than the mode of the moment demanded. A beret perched incongruously on her head.

Arnold's appearance was even more extraordinary. He wore a black velvet smoking jacket over a knitted red waistcoat. His gray flannel trousers were both shaggy and spotted. Susan shuddered. Like most girls of her age and type she passionately desired to conform. The Strinskys were not only unconventional; they were weird.

THE Ackroyds' chauffeur must have been used to all this because his features remained wordless, his manner perfect. Sonia gave Susan a hand when they stepped out to chatter animatedly to Ben.

The car wound along the same road Susan had traveled the day she went to Mr. Heath's. The lake stretched before them and, overlooking it on the edge of a ravine, was a house. A stone house, forbidding, magnificent.

The Strinskys tumbled out with their incredible luggage and Ben and Susan followed. They went up broad steps to a grilled iron door which a man servant swung open for them.

A thin, elderly woman was descending the staircase. She introduced herself as Mrs. Fleury, the chambermaid. She said Denise had been unavoidably detained at the club but would be in directly and would like to go to their rooms?

Ben and Arnold lingered below. Susan was shown into a high ceilinged room, crowded with delicate French furniture. The great, low bed had a gilded head-piece and the coverlet was of faded peach brocade. It was all subtly elegant. Through an open door she glimpsed a bathroom done in apricot tile. The glass shelves were crowded with heavy levels and scented soaps. After the maid had left her Susan went to the window and stared out. The lake rushed and tumbled below.

What now, she wondered? She had a grave sense of foreboding and "reality. Faithful to Rose's instructions, she shook out the white lace gown and "posed it carefully on its hanger. Then, having brushed her hair and washed her hands in the gargantuan basin, she shyly went down.

THE group was animated now. Denise, vivid in

AMERICA'S COLONY OF 'PURE' COMMUNISM GOES CAPITALISTIC AFTER 90-YEAR TEST

Ban on Love-Making Is Lifted As Sect Incorporates

Amana, Iowa—After existing for 90 years on a basis of "share and share alike" for its members, America's oldest and most successful experiment in "pure" communism has decided that its plan is a failure and is getting ready to change to the ways of capitalism.

Already the near future the 26,000-acre Amana Society colony here, owned by 1200 members of a German religious sect, will be converted into a co-operative stock company chartered under the laws of Delaware.

Going thoroughly modern, it has hired a Cedar Rapids efficiency expert to direct its affairs.

For nearly a century, the members have pooled their holdings and their labor and shared equally in the returns. Crops have gone to common granaries, the surplus sold and the affairs of the colony administered by a board of trustees who saw to it that each member received food, clothing, shelter and an education. No member drew any money; there was no use for it.

Under the new plan, expected to become effective June 15, individuals will be issued stock in the $2,000,000 company and will receive wages for their work. They also will be allowed to buy or rent their own homes from the corporation.

Communism has failed, the bearded leaders of the Amana colony explain, because the present generation does not have the zeal for common ownership that inspired the founders.

Confident of getting a good living under the "share and share alike" plan, many of the younger members have not worked so hard. As a result, profits have declined and in recent years the colony trustees have been having a hard time trying to make ends meet.

Modernism also enters into the change. The younger generation is tired of living in an atmosphere of 200 years ago, under customs like those that existed when the sect was founded in Germany in 1714. They want automobiles, movies, electric lights, radios and other modern things that the ancient laws of the colony brand as "sinful."

Ambitious ones among the young members also want a chance to get ahead in the world. They are tired of seeing individual industry and initiative stifled under a system that offered no more than the bare necessities of life.

Already, the change has begun. The community kitchens in the seven villages of the colony, where the women took turns at cooking the food, have been abandoned. Members now dine in their homes instead of in the community dining halls, where the men sat on one side of the room and the women on the other.

The ancient bells in the meeting houses which summoned three generations of colonists to their work in the community fields every day except Sunday are silent now (or the first time in 90 years). They are now planting individual gardens.

It is hard to tell how many changes in social customs will follow the changes in economic methods at Amana colony, but these doubtless will be equally revolutionary.

For one thing, the young people of the community are said to be very much dissatisfied with the present system of marriages in which all engagements must be approved by a vote of the trustees. After the engagement is approved, the girl and the boy must live in separate villages for one year prior to the ceremony and conduct property was held in common and the proceeds administered by the trustees.

The girls, too, object to the ancient rules of the colony which require them to wear the plainest of dresses and wear their hair in braids. Some, bolder than the rest, have already bobbed their hair and modernized their attire, despite the protests of the gray-bearded elders that such things are "sinful."

The Amana colony traces its origin to a religious organization founded in Germany in 1714. It added communism to its program when the group established itself in this country in 1842, on a 5,000-acre tract near Buffalo, N. Y. In 1854 they sold their lands at a profit and moved to Iowa.

It is not only the oldest experiment in "pure" communism in the Picturesque days of the Amana, Ia., colony, "America's little bit of Europe," are fading as the sect of "pure" communism incorporates and returns to capitalistic practices after 90 years. Above are typical scenes of the closing days. Top left, men and women at work in the fields where all their food was raised. Right, an Amana father and his son returning from the day's work. Below, the dining rooms, where men and women of the sect ate separately after the summons sounded by the ancient bells in the homestead steeple called them from their tasks. Now all colonists will live at home, the younger generations objecting to communal life and profits.

United States, but has been the most successful. For many years it prospered while similar colonies, promoted by other religious sects, tried it and failed. It continued to prosper until a few years ago, when the third generation began to lose interest in the religious fervor that had inspired their forefathers in founding it.

Under the rules of the colony, all property was held in common and the proceeds administered by trustees. The latter selected youths for doctors, dentists and teachers and sent them to college at the colony's expense, but upon graduation they were required to return and serve the community.

Families lived in community-owned houses, each person over 16 being entitled to a private room. Meals were cooked in community kitchens, serving in community dining halls. Furniture and clothing was supplied by community-owned manufacturers, as were blankets manufactured by the Amana colonists in their blanket factory. Those blankets also have found a ready sale on the open market and added greatly to the colony's income.

Everything else that the colonists needed in their daily lives was bought for them by the trustees out of the general fund.

the same or slightly less than they were at the peak. This mass of consumers has slightly less purchasing power now, as compared with previous years. They are spending their money as they make it. They are buying furniture for the home, clothes for the children, taking their week-end outings, having their children's teeth straightened and what not. In fact, they are not conscious of the so-called depression. It means nothing to them.

"Let this large percentage of our population be told the value of purchasing today. Let them be shown merchandise of good quality. Let them go their own way without forever preaching to them the theory that business is very bad and that it will improve next month, next fall or next year.

"The same rule applies today that always has applied and always will. Hard work well done or quality merchandise well bought and well advertised will always bring profits and success."

Once Busy Mart Is So Quiet You Can Hear Prices Drop

By PAUL HARRISON

New York. —(NEA Service)—While a Senate committee in Washington has investigated practices of securities selling, the New York Stock Exchange itself has been so quiet you could hear the prices dropping.

Just Waiting
The floor has been tense and nervous, with bear transactions being made almost in silence. Each bit of news from Washington has commanded more attention than buying orders from members' offices.

Would the Senate committee disapprove "short selling"? Would stock sales be taxed? Or could Richard Whitney, president of the Exchange, swing the investigators to his point of view—that "short" selling is essential to a free securities market, and that a tax might so reduce trading that the Exchange would have to close?

"All the public ever hears," said a member of one firm, "is how much the buyers of securities have suffered. But what do you suppose has happened to the Exchange itself, and the brokers who are dependent on its activity?"

Well, here is what has happened: Outside the impressive old building, which is rather badly in need of a bath, there is something of the serenity of a rural churchyard. Where huge crowds milled in 1929 to share in the thrill of sky-rocketing paper fortunes, sandwich men now stalk up and down, a gardenia peddler watches his unsold wares wither in the spring sunshine, and a lone policeman yawns.

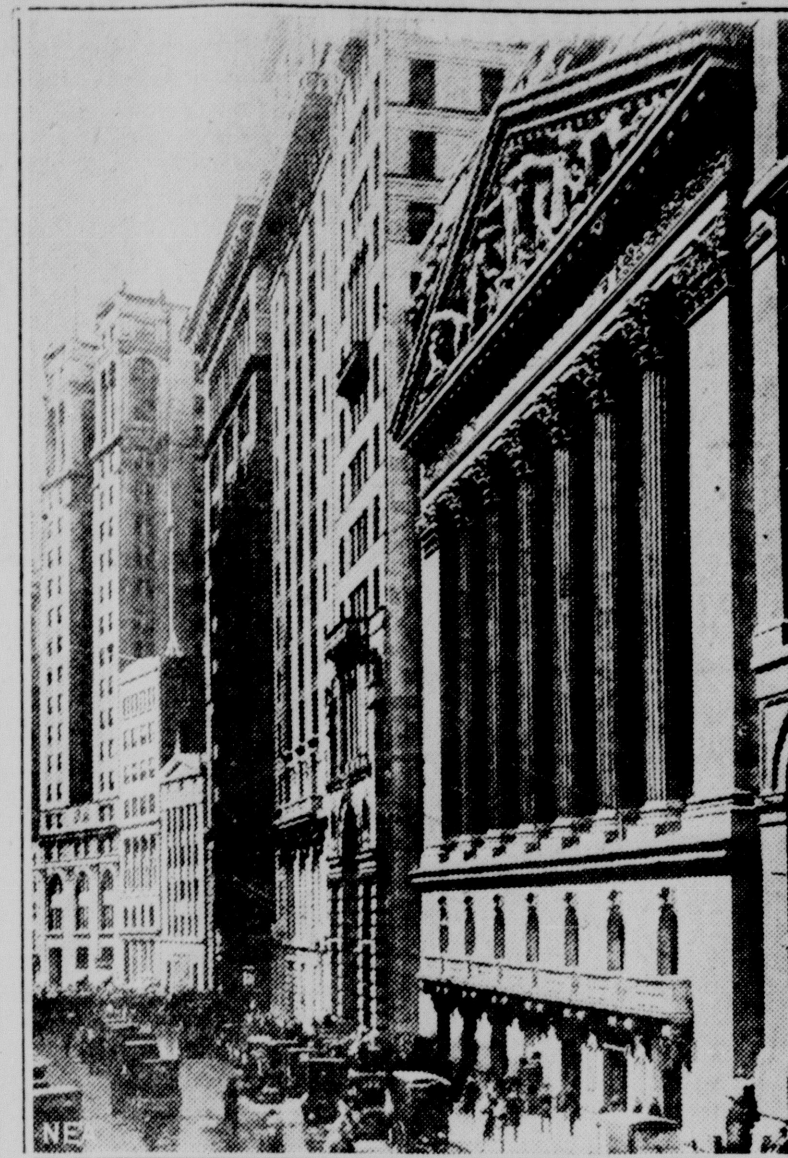

The trading floor is at street level, with elevated balconies, for the batteries of high-speed machines which transmit records of stock transactions. Only four of the six machines, manned by skeleton crews of operators, are working now.

Galleries Closed
Above these on both sides of the huge, high room, are the visitor's galleries. These are deserted, not entirely because of lack of public curiosity, but because they were closed last fall when rumors of a bomb plot struck terror to the crowded trading floor.

For the floor looks crowded, regardless of the small amount of business transacted there. Even the dullest day, will find about 3000 men and boys milling about the seventeen posts and the telephone booths where the floor members maintain contact with their offices. At least 100 of these are ticker men; some 1200 are page, quotation and tube boys.

Killing Time
Many of the brokers (all of whom are identified with big celestial buttons) are obliged to remain on the floor whether or not they have anything to do.

One gray haired old specialist, who always may be found at Post No. 1, employs most of his five-hour day in working cross word puzzles.

A few years ago the scene of feverish activity . . . as paper fortunes mounted . . . the Stock Exchange is quiet these days . . . and watchful waiting supplants the turmoil of yesterday.

On the walls at opposite ends of the main trading room there are large call boards, electrically operated, which flash the numbers of members when they are wanted on the telephone by their offices. On a reasonably busy day in normal times there are at least 300 of these numbers constantly being flashed. Today the average is from ten to twenty-five.

The big lounge and the smoking room is always crowded these days. Backgammon has become a popular pastime when the idle floor members. Many of them read magazines and newspapers, occasionally glancing up at the screen-projected image of the ticker tape that moves at a snail's pace across one side of the room.

Occasionally a few bored members may be found matching coins—of small denominations. And some of them play a word game on the tape; as the abbreviations of the various securities are flashed on the screen, the first contestant to form a word from consecutive letters wins the stakes.

Lunch Popular Now
The Exchange Luncheon Club, on the seventh floor of the building, is enjoying unprecedented prosperity. In boom times it is little patronized, the floor members taking their lunch on the job

—a sandwich and coffee brought by a page.

Now, however, it is a simple matter to get away for a couple of hours and still be within easy call of the floor in case the unexpected should happen. Incidentally, no member, regardless of his wealth is allowed to run up a bill of more than $100 at the club. Contrary to common belief that membership of the Exchange is larger than ever before. In February, 1929, 275 seats were added to the previous total of 1100 to take care of the tremendous volume of trading. It was only recently that all of those seats were disposed of. But it is a sad commentary that seats which brought a high of $625,000 in 1929 now are going begging at slightly more than $80,000.

POET'S CORNER

"OUR ICE-MAN"

We had the grandest ice-man
Gee, I sure tho't him swell,
I learned to say words like he did
Like darn 'n' gosh 'n' hell.

My Ma when she first heard 'em
Asked, who taught those to you?
I told her, "Why, the ice-man,"
And her face turned almost blue.

Next day I heard her say to him
"I don't want anymore
Of that kind of talk that my son
heard
You say around here before."

"Yes mam," he answered, "I mean
no
It wasn't me. It couldn't have been."
So she gave him a piece of her choice mince pie
And said, "Well, don't let it happen again."

As he came walking 'round the house
With the piece of pie in his hand,
He gave me a big bite of it.
He's the best ice-man in the land.

When I walked into the kitchen
With a piece of crust on my lip,
Ma asked if the ice-man liked the pie
I answered, "Sure it was a pip."

"In fact," I added, "He said if you
Were makin' pies for the Devil,
He'd make a special trip to Hell everyday."
And that was on the level.

For some unknown reason, I don't know
For I've looked for him everywhere,
That swell ice-man doesn't come anymore
Pa bought Ma a new frigidaire.

THE GINKGO TREE

The Kinkgo tree is a western Chinese.
The only one of it's kind.
It nods and kowtows to the man who knows
How a landscape should be de-

You may love Sitka spruce,
Or silver fir, and even sequoia, so

But the tree, you'll agree,
The most worshipful tree,
Is the ginkgo out there by the wall.
